Death Toll Mounts To 18 As Algeria Violence Rises

FIRES MAJOR MENACE

Fatalities Low As New Year's Holiday Starts

By United Press International

New Year's celebrations got off to an early start Saturday night and reports from traffic safety officials gave the whoopee-makers something extra to be glad about.

The holiday traffic toll was running at the slowest pace of any new year's weekend in history, the national safety council reported. It was only one third as high as the death count of last weekend's Christmas holiday, when 325 persons died.

CRASH KILLS EIGHT

A single holiday tragedy dominated the death count and put Oklahoma at the top of the casualty list with 10 fatalities. A few hours after the holiday's start, two cars crashed in flames on a highway near Cordell, Okla., and eight persons, five of them children, died.

Elsewhere, there were seven traffic deaths in California, six in New York State and four in Virginia.

Traffic	86
Fires	20
Miscellaneous	14
Total	120

Fires ranked as a major holiday menace. Near Orinda, Calif., fire and an explosion killed a man, his wife, and their two small sons. Three children burned to death when fire broke out in an apartment house at Dallas.

New Year's had not been regarded as a major traffic killer. In a pre-holiday estimate, the council had said the death count could be expected to reach 330, compared to the 300 normal for a non-holiday weekend at this time of year. Last year's toll was 338 and the highest ever recorded for a three-day New Year's weekend was 370 in 1959.

The calendar said 1961 still had 24 hours' life left to it, but in many states party-goers turned out to ring in the New Year Saturday night.

Blue laws which prohibit or limit Sunday drinking prompted the Saturday night galivanting. It was the night for New Year's eve parties in much of New England, the District of Columbia, Missouri, Kansas, New Mexico, Tennessee, Indiana, Iowa, Ohio and other states.

Area Drivers Are Urged To Use Caution

Officers Hopeful For Death-Free Holiday Weekend

Law enforcement officers in the Monroe area are warning motorists to take extra precautions on the highways during the New Year holiday weekend now in progress.

Ouachita Parish had one fatality during the past week, less than 24 hours after a deathless Christmas weekend was reported for this area.

Once again, the Louisiana department of public safety urges the "light up and live" campaign to traveling Louisianans, as a warning device to drive carefully. This campaign, where motorists drive with their car headlights on during the daylight hours, has been attributed as one factor in the decrease of holiday traffic accidents this year.

HEAVY TRAFFIC

Local law agencies said that no one in this area should become a needless statistic if all motorists practice safe and careful driving habits while the highways are heavily loaded with the New Year weekend traffic.

Monroe Police Chief James C. Kelly said he hoped everyone "will drive with a safe hand" and extra caution so they will be here "to enjoy 1962."

Troop F, state police who recorded a traffic fatality shortly after 10 p.m. last Tuesday said they hope there are no more fatalities this long weekend which officially began 6 p.m. Friday and ends at 12 midnight New Year's Day.

Jack Carter, 78, of 608 Grammont was the fatality Tuesday when he stepped in front of a car on U.S. Highway 165 just south of Monroe.

Katangans Accepting Unity Idea

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga, (UPI)—Most of President Moise Tshombe's Cabinet members have acccepted the idea that Katanga cannot be free and independent of the rest of the Congo, informed observers said Saturday.

They said Tshombe's renewed tirades against the United Nations and U. S. Ambassador Edmund A. Gullion were designed to prepare public opinion for a major Katanga switch acknowledging the hopelessness of trying to keep Katanga separate.

The cabinet members were not prepared to re-enter the Congo as a lowly province completely subservient to the Leopoldville government but only as a demi-independent province with some formal links with the central government, the sources said.

Tshombe appeared to be trying to convince the Katangese he has been forced to end the secession bid because of overwhelming outside pressure—chiefly from the United States—rather than from any desire on his own part.

Tshombe attacked Guillion immediately after the Kitona conference with Central Congolese Premier Cyrille Adoula in which Tshombe signed an eight-point agreement ending Katanga's secession and accepting the authority of the central government.

President Joseph Kasavubu signed a decree Saturday in Leopoldville convening the Katanga Provincial Assembly at the U.N. military base at Kamina early in the new year.

HIT BY LIGHTNING

Girl Winning Fight To Live

DETROIT (AP) — A storm was passing over Detroit last Aug. 5 and Kathy Meerschaert, 16, started to run under a tree less than a block from her home to escape the rain.

A bolt of lightning ripped the sky just as she reached the tree and knocked Kathy senseless to the ground.

Kathy hasn't spoken a word since. She can't. The lightning bolt, which stopped her heartbeat and burned her badly, left her paralyzed from the neck down.

Doctors massaged Kathy's heart and restored its beat. They hope eventually to restore her speech and, maybe, return her to normal living.

It was six weeks before Kathy regained consciousness. Doctors feared her brain might have been injured when her heart stopped and oxygen to her brain was cut off, but tests have shown her nerve centers and muscular reflexes are all right and that neither her memory nor her mental ability has been affected.

Kathy is the second youngest of the 10 children of Marie Meerschaert.

Her mother said: "Kathy doesn't forget names or persons. We could tell by her eyes and smile and the way she lifted her eyebrows that she recognized the names of her classmates on the greetings.

"Her picture will appear in the school's Junior Classbook next June. She's still considered a member of the class. The other students are just waiting for her to come back to school."

Mrs. Meerschaert doesn't know when that will be but points out "We feel it's a miracle she's alive. We feel there still are a lot of miracles left."

SUFFER FROSTBITE

Scouts Rescued From Icy Slope

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (UPI) — Forest rangers fighting time and four-foot snow drifts Saturday rescued two Boy Scouts who had spent three nights in the open on icy slopes of the Great Smokey Mountains National Park.

Explorer Scouts Mike Harrington, 15, and Allen Wallen, 17, were found "very much alive" and waiting calmly for rescuers.

One had a wrenched ankle and both were suffering from severe frostbite and exposure, but their Scout training saved their lives.

FOUND BY RANGERS

Park rangers found them waiting about two miles west of a shelter station at Peck's Corner and just about two miles from a road passable to Park Service jeeps. Rangers carried toboggans on a jeep to Peck's Corner on which to push the boys from the woods but found the boys would be able to walk up to the road.

Harrington, Wallen, Ed Nichols, 18, and Steven Shepherd, 16, all members of Air Explorer Scout Squadron 14 at Knoxville, set out Wednesday morning to make a winter hike along the Appalachian Trail. The trail, a mountaintop path reaching from Maine to Georgia, is about 5,000 feet up in the Smokies.

Bad weather turned them back from their original objective, and they decided to hike the 26 miles from Newfound Gap on the Tennessee-North Carolina bo.. r to Davenport Gap. Their Scout adviser, John Jackobs Jr., hiked part of the way with them to be sure the trail was safe and told them he would return Friday at noon to pick them up.

Nichols and Shepherd showed up at park headquarters here Friday afternoon suffering from frostbite. They said they last saw their companions about 2:30 a.m. Thursday.

The boys had hiked about 10

West May Test Clean Bomb Soon

LONDON (UPI) — Western scientists were authoritatively reported to have all but solved the problem of how to produce a "clean" nuclear bomb.

Theoretically, it should now be possible to make an H-bomb that will cause no, or almost no, fallout after explosion, the source said.

But Western scientists want it tested to make sure their theoretical findings prove fully effective in practice. All the more so because, according to latest information reaching the West, the Russians appear to have made noticeable progress lately towards making a clean bomb.

It was understood here that these considerations play a dominant role in the current American - British discussions about resuming nuclear tests in the atmosphere.

The West was said to be ahead of Russia in this field, but could fall behind if Russia continued testing while the United States did not.

Air dust samples reportedly collected by planes from the recent Soviet nuclear explosions apparently have led Western scientists to believe that Russia has a far cleaner bomb now than she ever had in the past.

The strategic effect of clean bombs is rated highly important militarily, because if a nuclear blast produced no or almost no after effects troops could move into the bombed area almost at once.

JFK Slates Conference On Defense

Military Leaders To Attend Meet In Palm Beach

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — President Kennedy Saturday summoned the nation's military leaders to a first-of-the year conference on America's state of preparedness.

The meetings will extend over a period of two days and will be conducted at the borrowed oceanfront mansion where the President and his family are spending the holidays.

START TUESDAY

The White House announced the Chief Executive will meet Tuesday with Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Deputy Defense Secretary Roswell Gilpatrick. These three officials will remain overnight in Palm Beach for a Wednesday conference with the President and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Central Intelligence Director John A. McCone also will come south Wednesday for a later afternoon meeting with Kennedy.

Meanwhile, the White House announced that President and Mrs. Kennedy had decided the First Lady's trip to India and Pakistan, originally set for late January, should be put back until early March.

The reason given for the delay was the illness of the President's father, former Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, who suffered a stroke Dec. 19. Doctors said Saturday he was continuing to improve.

White House officials would not comment on speculation the decision to delay Mrs. Kennedy's trip may have been influenced in part by the recent trouble between India and Goa, the Portuguese enclave attacked by Indian armed forces. Press Secretary Pierre Salinger read to reporters the announcement concerning Mrs. Kennedy's trip, and refused to go beyond it.

The President drove himself to the hospital Saturday to see his father. He made the trip in a top-down convertible, and later he and his family ignored the chilly weather that had many Floridians shivering and went for an early afternoon cruise on the White House yacht, Honey Fitz.

State Requests Court To Drop Area Bus Suits

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP)—Atty. Gen. Jack Gremillion filed motion in federal court here Saturday asking that three bus depot integration suits brought by the Justice Department be dropped.

In the alternative, Gremillion asked that the State Public Service Commission be joined as a defendant in the consolidated cases covering desegregation of terminal facilities at Ruston, Monroe and Alexandria.

Gremillion charged that the federal action violated the 10th Amendment to the Constitution, that plaintiff had failed to join the commission in the case, and that no basis for relief has been presented.

The government filed the suits to enjoin parish officials from preventing desegregation of terminals.

The interstate commerce commission, a party to the suits, has ordered desegregation. However, transportation firms have been stopped by state judges acting under Louisiana laws and public service commission regulations.

CROP LOSSES HEAVY

Florida Shivers In Record Cold

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Florida's severest cold spell this winter, already responsible for considerable agricultural losses, upset forecasters' predictions and promised another frigid night for the Sunshine State Saturday night.

The cold has already rewritten low temperature records across the state and damaged or destroyed fruit, vegetable and flower crops.

Heavy crop losses were reported in the prime agricultural area around Lake Okeechobee in south central Florida, where the mercury dropped to 25 degrees before daybreak Saturday.

FORECAST WARMER

Forecaster Neil Frank of the Miami Weather Bureau said the front had moved southward through the Bahamas and to the east coast of Cuba, but an expected wind shift from northwest to northeast, which would have brought in air warmed by the gulfstream, did not materialize.

"We are still forecasting a gradual warming, but it has been delayed," Frank said.

No immediate estimate was made of damage to the huge orange, grapefruit and tangerine groves in which the mercury plunged to as low as 20 degrees. It remained below the freezing mark for 5 to 10 hours in colder locations.

Ice formed in citrus fruit in some of those areas. However, juice concentrate firms can make use of fruit that has been iced, offsetting losses suffered by growers.

The cold destroyed 3,700 acres

Mercury Sinks To Minus 62 In Fairbanks

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) —Chilled but cheerful, residents of this interior Alaska city functioned under handicaps Saturday after two weeks of numbing cold in which the mercury dropped as low as minus 62.

The citizens are no strangers to temperature extremes in the 15,000-population Fairbanks area but oldtimers admitted this was extraordinary.

The frigid weather, stemming from a high pressure area over Siberia, hit the city Dec. 16 with readings of around 40 below. It got colder steadily. December records were broken or tied the last nine days.

Thursday night's minus 62 was two degrees below the all-time low for December. Friday the maximum was 5 below and early Saturday it was minus 61.

City Manager Clifford Nordby said the extreme cold put the city on a semiemergency status. Skeleton crews operated most city offices.

One cheerful note was a drastic drop in the crime rate.

"We have had very few arrests," said one police official, "and it's so cold that people are even staying out of the downtown bars."

Crowds Run Rampant In Large Cities

PARIS (AP)—European extremists in Algeria struck back with strikes and violence Saturday at President Charles de Gaulle's plan to speed that troubled North African land down the road to independence. Bloody clashes left 18 dead and nearly 80 injured in a day.

But the other faction in Algeria, the Algerian nationalist rebels, appeared ready to take De Gaulle at his word and begin negotiations for a final settlement, a high source said. The Algerian struggle against French rule now is in its eighth year.

PARALYZE PORT

Led by the outlawed right-wing secret army organization, Europeans sworn to keep Algeria a part of France virtually paralyzed the big port of Oran, Algeria's second city, with strikes and demonstrations. Violence also erupted in Algiers, Algeria's largest city.

Authorities said 10 persons were killed in Oran and eight in Algiers in the 24 hours following De Gaulle's year-end radio and TV speech that angered Europeans in Algeria. Dusk brought an uneasy calm to both cities, which counted nearly 80 injured.

Earlier, crowds of youths swept through the streets of Oran shouting "Death, death" to Moslems. Business houses run by Europeans closed in protest against the killing of two youths in clashes with military patrols shortly after De Gaulle spoke.

The stern old president made it clear in his speech that he would not be swerved from his program to give Algeria's nine million Moslems independence, despite rightwing violence and opposition from among Algeria's one million Europeans.

There is ready to believe, said circles close to the president, that

Tax 'Bite' Rises Again On Monday

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Another increase in Social Security taxes—the sixth in nine years—takes effect Monday.

Employes who earn $4,800 or more in 1962 will have $189 deducted from their pay checks. That is $6 more than they paid this year and $96 more than they paid in 1953.

The tax for employes earning as much as $4,800 annually will jump to $174 in 1963, to $198 in 1966, and to $222 in 1968.

The increases, all scheduled under existing law, are necessary to meet long-range costs of the benefits of the program.

President Kennedy next month will renew his request that Congress expand the benefits to include hospitalization and nursing home care for elderly persons covered by the program, with consequent tax increases.

The Social Security tax now applies to the first $4,800 in annual earnings. About 61,500,000 job holders are paying taxes under the program. The pending increases also apply to employers who must match the tax contribution of their employes.

The tax rate now is 3 per cent for employes and 3 per cent for employers. It will climb to 3⅛ per cent on Monday, 3⅝ per cent in 1963, 4⅛ per cent in 1966, and 4⅝ per cent in 1968. The self-employed will pay 50 per cent more.

Booklet Tells How To Survive Fallout

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government published Saturday its grim booklet telling citizens how to survive the deadly dew of fallout—with a foreword saying millions would die under nuclear attack but other millions could be saved.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, in an introductory statement, said the 48-page, pocket-size handbook is designed "to give the American people the facts they need to know about the dangers of thermonuclear attack and what they can do to protect themselves."

The booklet, under preparation for months by Defense Department experts on civil defense, will go into distribution on Tuesday, passed out by hundreds of post offices and state and local Civil Defense offices.

The initial printing, done under contract by the Government Printing Office with 21 printing firms, totals 25 million copies.

The Pentagon estimates the total cost of printing and distribution at $325,000 or about 3 cents per copy.

As it did in an announcement earlier this month on the incentive payment plan for helping with construction of fallout shelters, the Defense Department again discounts the probability of nuclear attack.

"The foreign and defense policies of your government make such an attack highly unlikely, and to keep it unlikely is their most important aim," says the booklet's preamble. "It is for this reason that we have devoted so large an effort to creating and

U.S. Retains Hopes On Laos

WASHINGTON (AP)—The State Department said Saturday it expects further negotiations toward establishment of a new government in Laos despite collapse of direct talks among the three Laotian princes this week.

Prince Souvanna Phouma, premier-designate in the proposed neutralist government, left Vientiane Saturday. Prince Souphanouvong, leader of the pro-Communist Pathet Lao, had left earlier. They had traveled there to meet with Prince Boun Oum, premier of the conservative, Western-backed government of Laos. But they met only briefly and reported little or no progress.

WITH WILDLIFE TALE

Texan Wins Title Of Champion Liar

The annual prize was given Saturday by the Burlington Liars' Club.

Hutcheson, whose letterhead says he deals in oil properties, wrote:

"For years I have been working to perfect a duck call. Satisfied with my laboratory tests, I recently decided to give it a field trial. The first time I blew the call the ducks swarmed in from all directions; the sky was black with them.

"I cut loose with my pump gun and with six shots killed my limit of six ducks. What is so strange about that, you say? Well, when I picked up those ducks I found out that three of them were decoys!"

Four lies won honorable mention. Ben Dotzenrod, Sharon, Wis., wrote: "It was so cold out in Sharon township last winter that we had to put anti-freeze in the cows' drinking water to keep the milk from freezing in their udders."

Lowell Wolfe, Sturgis Mich., wrote that he and his wife bought a compact car. "You have no idea how economical it was. One night I ran out of gas a mile from home, and I squeezed enough fluid out of my cigarette lighter to drive the rest of the way home."

The statement that "in all my seven years of teaching fourth grade, every single child in my classroom has behaved like an absolutely perfect angel every single day" won liar's honors for Mrs. Bernice M. Swanson, Midland, Tex.

of young sugar cane and severely damaged another 8,000 acres at the Okeelanta sugar refinery. In the Belle Glade area, ice was found in ears of corn and heads of cabbage.

Harvesters rushed in and salvaged a large quantity of vegetables on truck farms in the Orlando section.

Ornamentals also suffered. A report from one large nursery said plants were burned by cold and will be unmarketable.

A relentless winter blast pounded Buffalo, N. Y., for the second straight day. Snow fell 18 inches deep in some areas. Highways were packed with an ice-snow covering. More snow was predicted.

With the wintry front came death. Two elderly men suffered fatal heart attacks while shoveling snow at their homes. Another motorist collapsed and died of a heart attack while driving during a snow storm.

New York City had its second lowest temperature of the month —a chilly 16 degrees. Some snow fell.

Brisk temperatures forced Miami vacationeers to coats and jackets. Mercury readings were in the 20's. The freezing condition spread throughout much of the state and into the Everglades.

Hotel owners saw temperatures tumble to 16 at Ocala, Fla., 17 at Tallahassee, 19 in Gainesville and 27 at Daytona Beach. Appalachicola recorded its lowest—32—temperature for this date. Miami's 39 degrees was also a record.

In the snow-crusted midwest, Missouri temperatures dropped to 18 below at Albany, 11 below at St. Joseph and 12 at Chillicothe.

In Effingham, Ill., Mrs. Janett Cadem took the weather in her own hands and burned down her House. Mrs. Cadem set fire to her house while trying to thaw some water pipes with a blow torch.

In Adrian, Mich., a man took care of his property in freezing weather in long underwear. Robert Blanks was looking out the window of his home when he saw a motorist ram his car. Blanks, clad only in long johns, dashed outside, grabbed the motorist and sat on him until police arrived.

the rebel provisional government in Tunis may soon disclose it is in accord with De Gaulle's general program.

Previous efforts have failed. But the careful process of allaying Moslem suspicion, making secret contacts to smooth the path, and the dramatic announcement by De Gaulle that he plans to withdraw the bulk of the 400,000-man army from Algeria next year gave rise to official hope.

One source, who declined to be identified but who knows De Gaulle's thinking on Algeria, said "there are signs they (the rebels) are ready" to go again to the conference table.

There was always the possibility that De Gaulle might have to resort to regroupment and partition to safeguard European settlers in Algeria.

This probably would mean placing the country's Europeans in rich coastal areas, leaving the barren interior to the Moslems. It would also necessitate maintenance of large military forces to protect the Europeans.

De Gaulle has enunciated this as one solution, but informed sources say that while he recognizes it might be necessary it is not a solution he would favor. That he feels it is not likely it will have to be employed is indicated in his troop withdrawal statement.

As he made clear in his address, De Gaulle wants an independent Algeria with continued economic and cultural ties with France. He regards the successful termination of the rebellion as perhaps his paramount task as chief of state.

He has already given some indication that he will not run again for the office of president. When his present terms ends in 1965 he will be 74 and presumably ready to put down the burdens of state.

It is known from sources close to De Gaulle that he favors a successor chosen on a universal suffrage basis and not selected as now by elected officials—municipal, regional and parliamentary.

De Gaulle, highly popular with the broad base of the nation, apparently feels his successor should have the same kind of backing, achieved by popular vote.

Election of a president by popular vote would require a referendum to change the constitution. Already De Gaulle has suggested a referendum should be held to approve any Algerian settlement.

Most members of Parliament believe the National Assembly will be dissolved next spring and that new elections will follow.

Canadians Take Dredge In Tow

BOSTON (UPI)—The crew of a Canadian tugboat made a $4 million catch Saturday when they took the dredge Cartagena under tow after its crew had abandoned it in a storm.

The tugboat Foundation Vigilant, skippered by Capt. James Shear of Halifax, N. S., radioed the Coast Guard here early Saturday afternoon that it had a line aboard the Cartagena—ending a six-day battle with the sea.

The message said the tug was heading toward Halifax at five knots with the valuable marine property. It was expected to arrive there Monday.

The dredge broke loose from the tug in a wild storm Christmas day. The Coast Guard rescued the crew of the dredge after all 10 members abandoned it— fearing that an 80-ton crane swinging wildly in the 20-foot seas would tear out its stern and send it to the bottom.

Three Children Burn To Death

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) —Three children were burned to death here Saturday in a fast-moving fire that destroyed their upstairs apartment in a frame building.

Killed were Douglas, 4; Bernard, 2, and Renee, 7 months, all children of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Allen.

Authorities said she had gone to work in a downtown drug store. Mrs. Allen, a Negro, had left her children in charge of a friend and neighbor, Mrs. Charlie Esther Richardson, who lives downstairs.

"I went upstairs to see about them just a little after Mary left," said Mrs. Richardson, 10, "and the fire met me at the door."

maintaining our deterrent forces. However, should a nuclear attack ever occur, certain preparations could mean the difference between life and death for you."

The booklet—entitled "Fallout Protection, What to Know and Do About Nuclear Attack'—explains in nontechnical language and with the aid of drawings the basics of nuclear weapons effects, of fallout and of the types and manner of constructing and living in community or family fallout shelters.

For purposes of the discussion, the booklet assumes the use of a weapon of five megatons — the equivalent of energy yielded in the explosion of five million tons of conventional TNT.

One reason for that relatively small size appeared to be that this might be the power of a warhead used in existing long-range ballistic missiles. Soviet Premier Khrushchev claims a capability for building bombs of more than 100 megatons, but there is doubt that these are in missile form.

The aim of the booklet is to advise how to survive the radioactive aftermath of nuclear attack. No hope is held out for those who happen to be within the range of the blast, heat and initial radiation of the fusion bomb.

A five-megaton burst at ground level, the booklet says, would destroy most buildings up to two miles from the burst; heat rays would kill unprotected people up to 10 miles away, and "the areas of blast and fire would be scenes of havoc, devastation and death."

Bigger bombs would cause greater havoc, although the effect of a 10-megaton bomb would not be twice that of a five-megaton explosion.

Where lives could be saved would be among the people who happened to live outside the instantaneously lethal area of the explosion but still in areas of drifting radioactivity.

The major radiation danger would occur within a 24-hour period following detonation. In half an hour, the first portion would reach a zone about five miles away; 20 miles away people would have nearly an hour to get into fallout shelters; 100 miles off, the time might be four to six hours. Much would depend on the wind.

The most dangerous fallout, of the heavy particles of debris from the fusion explosion, comes in the early phases. These particles are large enough to be seen—about the size of table salt or sand.

The thing to do, the booklet emphasizes, is to get into some kind of a structure into which the fallout particles cannot penetrate—and stay there, with only swift excursions outside, for as much as two weeks.

It scotches hope about some other methods discussed. Special clothing would provide little protection because radiation from the particles would pass through the fabric.

And "although many experiments have been conducted," the booklet says, "there is little likelihood that a pill or any other type of medicine will be developed that can protect people from the effects of fallout radiation."

How would Americans react under atomic attack?

The booklet says: "Experience has shown that many human beings act cooperatively when disaster strikes, many feel helpless, a few panic. Disaster studies indicate that information, planning, and preparation clearly increase the extent of cooperative and constructive behavior following a disaster."

The federal government favors the community shelters, although agreeing that personal preference or conditions in rural areas make necessary some family-type shelters.

The booklet gives the reasons: A community group probably will be better prepared than a single family; first aid and other emergency skills would be present; community shelters would provide protection for those away from home.

It also advances the idea of dual purpose shelters, used for community social life. "Gregarious teenagers often have an after-school hangout where they can relax with sodas and play the jukebox," the booklet says. "This shelter can serve such purpose admirably." Some Defense Department officials already have taken a dim view of such dual purpose use.

Community shelters can be built into new structures without great extra cost; they can be constructed underground with the surface left for civic property, playgrounds or other purposes. But, the booklet advises, existing buildings, even without change, can afford some considerable protection against fallout. It says this is especially true of tall office buildings where upper floors and multiple walls provide shielding.

The department estimates that a home family shelter can be built with about $150 worth of materials or less. Among other structures, either outside or in the basements, the booklet discusses earth or sand covering, concrete blocks and other material.

"A number of firms have entered the home shelter field," the booklet comments. "As in any new commercial activity there are abuses. Advertising claims may be misleading; design and products may be inadequate.

"Your state and federal governments will do what they properly can to minimize these abuses, but the most effective discouragement to those taking advantage of the rising interest in home shelters is your caution and shrewdness. You will have the cooperation of the Better Business Bureau, your local Civil Defense director and of your local, state and federal government officials concerned with such matters."

The booklet carries the names of eight industry associations that provide plans for home shelters, on request.

For those who are caught at the instant of a nuclear explosion, the booklet has this advice:

The first warning will be a brilliant flash (don't look at it!); dive under a desk, table or any other sturdy piece of furniture; try to get in a shadow away from the heat. If outside, run into a building or dive into a ditch; lie in a curled-up position.

When you get into your home shelter, life is going to be really austere for a couple of weeks. "Humans can live on a quart of water or other fluid a day but an allowance of a gallon is far more comfortable." Canned foods and tinned baked goods which require no cooking. "Good sanitation is not merely a matter of comfort; it could be a matter of life or death," and the "biggest single problem is the disposal of human waste," for which "the most elemental device is a metal pail with a tight cover."

What about radiation sickness? A mild sickness shows up with some nausea, lack of appetite and fatigue a few hours after exposure. Rest should bring rapid recovery. Moderate radiation shows up within two hours in vomiting and possibly prostration. Recovery may seem complete in three days, but symptoms recur later. Symptoms of severe attack may develop after a week or so with fever, mouth soreness, diarrhea and in the third week the hair may start falling. Recovery may take seven or eight weeks, but "when exposure has been overwhelming, death comes in hours or weeks."

The booklet recommends this treatment for moderate cases: general rest; aspirin for headache; motion-sickness tablets for nausea; liquids as soon as possible for diarrhea or vomiting.

Police Push Search For Missing Man

Marsala's brother, retired Army Col. Anthony J. (Tony) Marsala from San Antonio, Tex., praised the Monroe Police department for their "efficient investigation and search" for his missing general contractor brother.

Marsala came to Monroe to join in the search for his brother, which has led police from Monroe to Alexandria. Marsala's small white car was found in Alexandria Friday, and police have had no further developments since then.

Monroe Police Chief James C. Kelly said his department, with the co-operation of all other law enforcement agencies, has conducted an intensive search both by air and ground for the missing man.

He urged yesterday that "anybody" having seen him or some one they think might be Marsala, "please contact the Monroe police department."

Marsala's description has been published in newspapers and broadcast over radio and television since his disappearance Tuesday.

He was last seen wearing a navy blue sport coat, dark trousers and a short sleeve white shirt. He is five feet, eight and one-half inches tall, weighs 185 pounds, has brown eyes and black hair, greying around the edges. The family said he limps slightly.

The Marsala family is offering a $500 reward for anyone giving information that leads to his discovery.

Texas Runoff Election Date Set By Daniel

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Gov. Price Daniel Saturday set Jan. 30 as the date for a runoff election to select a successor to the late Speaker Sam Rayburn in the 4th Congressional District.

The date for the special election was announced after an official canvass of the Dec. 23 voting confirmed unofficial reports of a runoff between State Sen. Ray Roberts of McKinney and former District Court Judge R. C. Slagle Jr. of Sherman. Both campaigned as "Sam Rayburn Democrats."

The official canvass showed Roberts with 8,154 votes and Slagle with 5,945.

David Brown, Sherman attorney, was third with 2,393 votes, edging the sole Republican candidate, Conner Harrington, who had 2,353 votes.

Jack Finney, Greenville businessman, had 2,211 votes, and Roy Baker, Sherman attorney, 1,066.

miles along the trail Wednesday night when they were caught in a snowstorm that dumped 10 inches of snow on the mountains.

They tried to make a cold camp but decided finally to turn back.

Nichols and Shepherd went ahead while Harrington and Wallen stayed at the campsite to dry their clothing before starting out. Nichols and Shepherd beat their way through the snow for 10 hours Thursday and then waited at a trail-side shelter at Ice Water Springs for their companions to show up.

The others never appeared. They apparently missed the shelter in the darkness and walked past another shelter at False Gap without seeing it.

The Park Service mounted a massive search Friday night early Saturday. Army helicopters from Ft. Campbell, Ky., were preparing to join in the hunt when a small search party from Peck's Corner found the boys.

Capt. M. E. Kidd of Troop F pointed out that his department has already recorded an accident, but is thankful that it was only minor.

Troopers reported that five-year-old Kimberly Jane Hall, daughter of Hurst M. Hall, 28, of 610 Hancock St., Natchitoches, suffered minor lacerations of the head when their car overturned on U.S. Highway 165 north of Monroe Saturday.

Investigation revealed that Hurst, traveling south on the highway around 4:30 p.m., falsely anticipated a left turn by another vehicle and pulled his car off onto the shoulder of the road. By doing so, he hit loose gravel, lost control of the vehicle and overturned. The other vehicle did not make a left turn.

The little girl was taken to St. Francis hospital by Mulhearn ambulance. No charges were made in the accident which occurred approximately 2.7 miles north of Monroe city limits.

Egypt Halts Circulation Of Pound Abroad

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—A presidential decree issued Saturday night banned the circulation abroad of the Egyptian pound "to avoid fluctuations" in its value.

The decree was announced by Dr. Abdel Moneim Kaissuny, minister of economy in the United Arab Republic, and was carried by the Middle East news agency.

The decree claimed among other things that Egyptian banknotes are being used as the subject of speculation by currency dealers abroad.

The decree said: "To avoid fluctuations in the pound's value, due to the abundance of amounts currently in foreign markets, it has been decided to ban the influx or efflux of Egyptian pounds from the U.A.R."

The decree added foreigners in possession of Egyptian pounds, and who at present are outside the U.A.R., will be given until January 31, 1962 to dispose of the pounds through "sanctioned banks" or U.A.R. embassies abroad in the following two alternatives:

1. To open a nonresident account in Egyptian pounds from which to spend inside the U.A.R. only:

2. To open an account estimated by dollars—at the average rate of exchange now ruling in foreign markets of $1.65 to the pound—to be used for either local spending here or in payment of Egyptian exports.

Deputy Reports Barbara Burns Is Near Death

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Barbara Burns, troubled daughter of the late comedian Bob Burns, was found unconscious Saturday and a sheriff's deputy said she was "as near death as I've ever seen."

Officers said they later found what appeared to be a suicide note in one of her pockets.

They said she may have taken an overdose of narcotics.

She was taken to General Hospital.

Miss Burns, 22, was found lying on a walkway in a residential-business area on Los Angeles' West Side. A resident of the area found her and called deputies.

Officers said her note was addressed to "mother" and to someone named Steve. It said in part: "I love you and am sorry. All I ever wanted was your love and you hate me and all money is to go to you and Bushy. Thanks for trying to help."

It was not immediately known who Bushy was.

Kennedy May Quit Hospital In 3 Weeks

PALM BEACH (UPI)—Barring unforeseen complications, President Kennedy's father may be able to leave the hospital in about three weeks and begin an outside program of learning to cope with the effects of paralysis.

Former Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy at the age of 73 is regarded by doctors as being of such spirit and basically good physical shape for his age that he should be able, with careful training, to conquer some of the paralytic effects of the stroke which felled him here Dec. 19.

The elder Kennedy has had fine medical care at St. Mary's Hospital in nearby West Palm Beach, watched constantly by a team of doctors headed by Dr. Marco Johansson of Palm Beach.

Various specialists have been called in at times and the latest was Dr. Howard A. Rusk, director of the Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation of New York.

Ambassador Kennedy's stroke was caused by a clot within a blood vessel of his brain. The clot caused a block in the flow of blood and this led to paralysis of his right side with immobility of arm and leg, and loss of the powers of speech.

It frequently happens with stroke victims, Kennedy went into mild pneumonia a few days after the initial attack. To ease his breathing and reduce lung congestion, it was necessary to make an opening in his throat.

Yesterday Rusk informed the President, "fever has subsided, the pneumonia has cleared, your father is taking nourishment in increasing amounts and there is a beginning return of voluntary movement."

It will be some six to eight weeks before specialists will want to make any precise prognosis. During that period rehabilitation procedures will be started and, as the swelling around the original clot is reduced, the elder Kennedy's powers of perception and motion are expected to return slowly. He is being given an anticoagulant drug to prevent formation of new clots and probably will take similar medication the rest of his life.

The senior Kennedy has been a driving, assertive individual all his life and doctors in the next few weeks face the task of discouraging him from trying to recover too rapidly. In fact, he was advised this week not to try talking for another week or two.

Offer Reward For Bookhart

VIDALIA (Special) — Authorities of this area of Southwest Mississippi and Northeast Louisiana have been notified that the Valley Towing Company of Greenville, Miss, has offered a $250 reward for the recovery of the body of Rollo Reynolds, 57, of Brookhart, Illinois.

Reynolds, an engineer aboard the steamer "Ole Miss", was reported missing near here Friday, Dec. 22. An all night search failed to locate the body in the Mississippi River near here.

The steamer's skipper speculated that rough water pitched Reynolds from the tow boat, near Vidalia and Natchez. Sheriff's deputies scoured the river in motorboats in an effort to locate the body after the drowning but no trace has been found of the missing man, presumed to have been drowned.

U.N. Observers Plan Proposed For Rhodesia

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Acting Secretary-General U Thant has suggested to Britain that U.N. observers be stationed at some airports and on some roads in Rhodesia to see that no military goods go into the Congo.

The United Nations disclosed this Saturday in reporting on a letter Thant sent British Delegate Sir Patrick Dean.

In London, a Foreign Office spokesman said Britain is willing to consider the proposal and will discuss it with the Rhodesian federal government.

The Foreign Office said Dec. 23 the British government was determined to do everything in its power to put an end to arms running into the strife-torn breakaway Congo province of Katanga.

The letter to Dean, delivered Friday, noted denials by Prime Minister Sir Roy Welensky of the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland that men and armed vehicles had gone from Rhodesia into Katanga.

The United Nations had charged that 48 jeeps entered Katanga from Rhodesia Dec. 21, that a Katangan plane took off from Ndola Dec .13 to bomb U.N. troops, and that 30 Rhodesian mortar specialists had entered Katanga with their weapons.

The announcement said that in his letter Thant suggested "in order that such charges may not arise in the future, U.N. observers may be stationed in certain airports and on certain roads within Rhodesia providing access to Katanga from Rhodesia."

1962 FOREIGN POLICY

Anti-Red Nations Buildup JFK Goal

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—President Kennedy, with a tough year of constant international crisis under his belt, has a grand design for foreign policy in 1962.

It is to build the non-Communist nations so their internal resources are sufficient to maintain their independence — whether we like their political ideas or not.

Toting up 1961, the President feels the Soviet bloc suffered greater setbacks than the Western alliance. Aside from the avoidance of war, he is driven by one central idea — that the independence of other nations is the greatest asset of the West in combating communism.

Kennedy thinks Western problems with Russia will continue as their leaders drive to expand their influence, economically and militarily, through the world. But he also believes the balance of power remains with the West. He feels 1961 saw two important divisions within the Soviet bloc, involving relations between Russia and Red China, and with Albania.

The President, however, is quick to dampen inordinate encouragement because of purges in the Communist camp. He thinks this would be foolhardy because even the worst dissidents within the Soviet bloc are united in their enmity for the West.

A picture of the President's attitudes Saturday came from persons close to the chief executive who have talked with him in the closing days of 1961.

He thinks, they say, that the potential for a flash explosion of war has not diminished in the past year. Berlin and Southeast Asia still are areas of high danger.

The current key to relations with Russia seems to be the forthcoming effort of Llewellyn Thompson, U. S. ambassador to Russia, to start realistic Berlin negotiations in Moscow next month. This will be an attempt to determine whether there can be any workable break-through in rigid and mutual distrust between East and West.

Kennedy has not yet decided whether to resume nuclear testing in the atmosphere. Reports to the contrary are dead wrong, although both this country and Great Britain now realize that underground testing has severe limitations, particularly in development of an anti-misile missile.

Friends say the President does not regard the Thompson talks in Moscow as a make-or-break attempt, but he feels they are awfully important. Pending their outcome, the chief executive sees no real reason to anticipate easier relations with the Soviet Union in 1962 or materially reduced international tensions.

The President does not feel the Russians made significant progress in 1961. Kennedy derives some satisfaction that despite dire predictions to the contrary, the Communists controlled no Middle East of African nations at the end of 1961.

He also is represented as regarding the Berlin wall as a vivid sign of deteriorating conditions in East Germany—a rather important concession of Soviet failure to justify her glowing promises for East German development. He also thinks it would have been foolhardy and unjustified to attempt tearing down the wall, believing this would have forced the Russians into fast military action.

Those who have talked recently with Kennedy also report that, in his opinion Russia's resumption of atmospheric nuclear tests must have represented urgent need because it destroyed years of Soviet anti-test propaganda.

The President is pictured as feeling that the period of colonialism is passing into history and not wanting the Communists to become heroes of anti-colonialism. For this reason, he argues that the U. S. must be prepared to assist all nations striving for independence although their political and procedural policies may be at variance with U. S. standards.

While the President does not think the overall danger of war has truly diminished in the past year, he does not feel there is imminent danger. He thought the tinder was highly dangerous during the Laotian crisis of early spring, and this continues to be a serious situation but of lesser proportions.

Canal Pledge Violated

Back in 1956, the United States made one of its now notorious international mistakes. When President Nasser of Egypt closed the Suez Canal illegally, Britain and France were ready to give Nasser's hide the tanning it needed. Israel, with no great liking for Egypt, was willing to lend a hand. They had already started a movement in the direction of forcing a reopening of the canal when the United States said, "'No, no."

If Britain and France had known what they know now about United States pussyfooting they might not have desisted even on American advice but they still figured they owed the United States a debt for pulling them through World War II, so they called off their dogs and agreed to "negotiate" with Nasser.

That was when the Egyptian dictator decided he was a big shot. He had made three big nations back down. Now he was one of the big international bosses, although he actually had only a piddling armed force, compared to those of England, France and the United States, and could have done nothing if they had used force rightfully in reopening the canal, as England and France wanted to do. After his success, he connived with Russia.

The result of the negotiations was that Nasser entered into an agreement and made a pledge that he would leave the canal open for free international passage unless Egypt was at war. Now he has eithviolated his pledge or has joined with India in going to war against Portugal. He denied Portugal the right to use the Suez canal for the purpose of making a defense against India's aggressions.

Does this mean that hereafter, to be protected against Nasser's partiality to this or that bloc in world affairs, the first step on the military agenda of a powerful nation must necessarily be to seize the Suez canal? It would have been easy to keep it open and out from under Nasser's control back in 1956 but now any of the western countries which might attempt such action probably would run afoul of Russia. It is beginning to become plain that one mistake is too many and that the United States policy of saying, "Let's make a deal," instead of standing up for its rights is paying off in a big way—for our enemies.

Not long ago Prime Minister Nehru of India, who, until recently, called himself a sort of prince of peace, stopped off at Cairo to visit President Nasser. Presumably an agreement was made then that if Portugal attempted to come to the rescue of its nationals in Goa, the Egyptians would block passage of any Portuguese ships through the canal.

Such a deal would imply that the head of the Indian government disclosed his plans for aggression. It would also force the cold conclusion that Nasser was a conspirator in the plan to assault the Portuguese holdings.

Nasser's violation of his pledge to allow ships of all nations, either armed or unarmed, to go through the canal or his conspiracy to make war on Portugal might properly be a matter for the United Nations to act upon. We know, however, that the United Nations is just as impotent to act against Egypt as it was to act against India because it is controlled by Russia and the Indian-African bloc.

The United States is like an obsessive gambler. It can't win in an international negotiation but it can't resist the temptation to go back for more losses.

Our country won't even stand up for its rights in the United Nations. It is just as logical for the United States to have 50 votes in the United Nations as it is for small African and Asian countries which cannot live without foreign aid each to have a vote equal to that of the United States.

When will we stop trying to godfather to other countries, even those which are communist, and start trying to defend our own rights?

Two Americans Sentenced

A strange paradox is that while life generally is held more cheaply in most countries than in the United States, the reverse is true when one person kills another. People probably get by with homicide more easily in the United States than in any other country, but we have yet to learn which policy is better.

In Japan an American woman and her 17-year-old son recently were sentenced to prison terms in connection with the fatal beating of the woman's husband. She was given eight years and his term was fixed at five to seven years.

Their American attorney called the sentences "completely unjustified." He appealed immediately.

In the United States there is little likelihood that the two would have been brought to trial. According to an official statement, the husband was killed by his son after he had slapped his wife and threatened to kill the entire family. In this country it is probable that the two would have been released on the ground that they acted in self-defense.

In England anyone who takes the life of another or who attempts to take a life, even his own, faces almost certain severe punishment. A famous automobile racing driver once was sentenced to prison because he was involved in a crash during a race and his assistant, riding with him, was killed. In that country, there is little emphasis on self-defense and evidence of this kind must be extremely strong to be of any value. Sentencing people to prison for attempting to take their own lives is not uncommon.

Many families are threatened repeatedly by drunken husbands and fathers and, in the United States, when such a man is killed by a member of the family there is a strong tendency to call such a killing self-defense. Sometimes this is justified but sometimes it seems to provide a sort of continuous open season on husbands and fathers.

As in many things, each case must be decided in accordance with circumstances. Even so, different countries act with different degrees of severity.

What Is Really Free?

There are two kinds of free things to which the people of the United States and all other lands aspire. One is personal and industrial freedom and the other is getting something for nothing. These things are exactly the opposite of each other, yet each has many adherents.

The free enterprise system means the right to own your own business or to work as you please, choosing the kind of work you want to do and the individual, firm or corporation for which you will work.

In recent years, when the tendency has been toward socialism, the chief proponent of so-called "something for nothing" has been the federal government. It talks of foreign aid, agricultural aid and medical aid and makes it appear as if the recipients in all of these fields are getting something for nothing.

"Something for nothing" merely means taking from some and giving to others which, of course, is the essence of socialism. Our federal government, when it engages in socialism, is like the famed Robin Hood. It robs some in order that it may have gifts for others.

G. M. Will Face Suit Soon

Attorney General Kennedy's New Year 'Greeting' To Be More Jarring Than That Given G. E.

Attorney General Robert Kennedy has a New Year "greeting" for General Motors Corporation even more jarring than his Christmas "gift" to General Electric.

It's an anti-trust prosecution designed to force giant GM to divest all but one of its five passenger car departments.

The case will be filed before the 36-year old Justice Department head starts on his goodwill world tour early in February. The anti-monopoly suit will be his largest since taking office . . and likely will continue to hold that record for some time.

In attempting to forcibly split up General Motors on monopoly grounds, Kennedy will be following through on Republican recommendation.

Robert Bicks, crusading young chief of the anti-trust division in the Eisenhower administration, vigorously urged such action after several years of investigation and preparation.

But former Attorney General William Rogers, after lengthy deliberation, left the highly explosive issue on the desk of his Democratic successor.

It has taken Kennedy a year to make up his mind to tackle GM.

This decision was reached after an intensive study of his own, and furthur careful investigation by the anti-trust division headed by Lee Loevinger, Bicks' successor.

Throughout this long scrutiny, Kennedy never discussed the dynamite-loaded case at a Cabinet meeting, or with individual members of the Cabinet.

Reason is Defense Secretary Robert McNamara, former head of Ford Motor Co.

The Attorney General did talk the matter over with his older brother, the President. They agreed on one thing: The decision would be up to the Justice Department chief.

Bicks' militant recommendation for a massive monopoly suit against General Motors was based on four major contentions:

(1) Numerous complaints from car dealers and others throughout the country, headed by GM's leading competitors; (2) an extensive investigation by Senator Estes Kefauver, D. Tenn., and a blistering report by his committee; (3) A federal grand jury probe that has been in progress in New York for two years; (4) A three-year long inquiry by the anti-trust division.

Senator Kefauver's voluminous report carried much weight with both Bicks and Kennedy.

In it, the Tennessean asserted that GM and its wholly owned subsidiary, General Motors Acceptance Corporation, are the largest manufacturing and sales finance concerns in the world; that GM owns and runs 119 plants in 64 cities in the U. S. and numerous others in 18 foreign countries; and employs more than 500,000 in its worldwide activities.

"General Motors", declared Kefauver, "is the leading producer of passenger cars, trucks, automotive parts, buses and locomotives in the world, and an important producer of off-the-highway moving machinery."

Automation Old

Machines Eventually Create More Jobs Than They Outmode

We give a thing a name and suddenly we have something altogether new. Automation is as old as man. Whoever invented the wheel; whoever learned how to make a fire out of sparks; whoever made animals domestic; the inventor of the needle and his successor, the inventor of the sewing machine — all these and millions of others were among the leaders of automation. The Old Testament, which is an excellent compilation of folklore, tells us:

"Adah bore Jabal: he was the father of such as dwell in tents and have cattle. And his brother's name was Jubal; he was the father of all such as handle the harp and pipe. And Zillah, she also bore Tubal-cain, the forger of every cutting instrument of brass and iron . . ."

Without the wheel nothing of our present civilization would have been possible. But we do not know who invented the wheel or how it came into existence. It is guessed that the wheel might have been invented in the Nile Valley or in the Valleys of the Tigris and Euphrates, but how did the wheel come to China?

Perhaps the second most significant stage of automation in the civilization of man is what we call the Industrial Revolution. The central point of this is the understanding of the use of steam.

The Industrial Revolution harnessed steam and changed the processes of manufacture and created our modern methods of production and distribution. Steam is nothing more than gas produced by water when it is boiled. The problem was how to prevent steam from flowing away or exploding. Many men worked at steam but it was James Watt (1736-1819) who, watching a teakettle, thought of how steam could push something up. Thus, steam was harnessed as an instrument of mobility and an entire new phase of automation developed which changed not only social, but economic and political conditions throughout the world.

The story of steam and its various applications to production and transportation is fascinating. But from the standpoint of this article, it is important to point out that although it was at first assumed that the application of steam would deprive men of jobs, actually the number of jobs increased, new industries came into existence and human beings enjoyed greater leisure.

This did not all happen at once. There were periods of adjustment and change, during which the shift from manual labor to machine labor increased poverty, but if we judge the human progress from the beginning of the 18th Century to the year 1961, it must be admitted that the Industrial Revolution has been beneficial to man from every standpoint. Its principal social manifestation was the shift of population from rural to urban with the development of the large city and all the opportunities for cultural development arising therefrom.

We now face another period of automation which will severely affect man, altering his social as well as economic institutions. This period is the result of the application of electronics to production and distribution and the reduction of time and space. This present change is not novel: it is a continuation of the Industrial Revolution with an expansion of our knowledge of mathematics, as well as chemistry and physics. One of the most significant manifestations of the period is the transmutation of metals. In this period, the outstanding figure is Albert Einstein whose philosophic conceptions led to the explosion of nuclear forms, changing the nature and use of metals and producing new basic chemicals. Einstein and others of this school opened a new world of mathematics which not only added to our knowledge and understanding but created the electronic world.

The vast changes that the current form of automation will bring about, cannot yet be judged or measured. Politically, it severely affects all countries because whereas the population of the world has increased, the usefulness of man in production decreases. Labor demands shorter hours and higher wages for less useful services. In fact, labor is beginning to ask for a four hour day because the supply of labor is enormous while the need of human labor grows smaller. This rejection of the law of supply and demand will have very serious political and social consequences during the next century. He would indeed court folly who would attempt to prophesy the consequences of this development, but this can be said: temporarily it will be unpleasant and in some areas revolutionary.

RED FLASHES — A carefully prepared speech on the "Dangers of Communism" is being distributed to all U. S. District Attorneys by the Internal Security Division of the Justice Department. The address was written for their "information and guidance" in giving public talks. The material for the speech comes chiefly from the FBI. Other Federal agencies also were asked to contribute, but the office of education was no help. It notified the Internal Security Division it had no information on the subject . . . . Red China is trying to exchange scientific and technical information with the U. S. Despite the lack of diplomatic relations between the two countries, and Peiping's daily diatribes against the U. S. the Reds' Institute of Scientific and Technical Information has sent to Washington a catalog of publications available for exchange. This is the first time in years the Communists have put out such a feeler . . . . More than 75 per cent of Cuba's trade is now with Iron Curtain countries. Before Castro came into power, Cuba did virtually no business with the Reds. But in the past year, Castro has greatly increased this dependence on the Soviet Bloc. Principal non-communist lands still doing business with the Cuban dictator are Canada, Britain, the Netherlands, United Arab Republic and Morocco.

POPULAR FELLOW — President Arturo Frondizi invited President Kennedy to visit Argentina in March or April—that country's fall. Kennedy promised to give the proposal "serious consideration" . . . . This is the latest of a number of invitations to make official trips to Latin American countries. They include Mexico, Panama, Nicaragua, Cost Rica, Peru and Chile . . Vice President Johnson, who did much foreign travel for Ike in 1961, is likely to do even more this year.

Drinking Slumps

Total Amount Of Liquor Sold Up By Person Rate Down

We're now starting the New Year's weekend - the period during which the average American drinks distilled spirits at the highest rate of the year. And judging from what I see on ordinary weekends in Suburbia and Exurbia, it'll be easy to believe that never before have so many of us had that one drink too many so publicly.

It won't be so, despite appearances on this wettest of the year's long holidays.

The number of Americans drinking distilled spirits is rising for the simple reason that there are millions more of us around to drink and also industry surveys indicate the percentage of adult men - drinkers is shrinking.

But the significant point is that our consumption of intoxicating beverages per person is declining. This year, the average American social drinker is consuming a little more than a gallon of whiskey compared with 1.31 gallons last year, 1.35 gallons a decade ago.

At the same time, we're drastically changing our drinking habits.

As John G. Martin, chairman of Heublein, Inc., put it in an interview the other day, "Twenty years ago, nearly 70 per cent of distilled spirits consumption was in bars and taverns with 30 per cent in the home. Today, the ratio has been reversed and home drinking accounts for the lion's share."

Simultaneously, the trend is clearly away from the "neat," stiff drink and toward lighter, not so alcoholic beverages and cocktails. The most dramatic evidence of this lies in the climbing consumption of vodka, which is less alcoholic than plain whiskey. As recently as 1950, this spirit was so tiny a part of our consumption that the U. S. Government didn't bother to report vodka sales in a class of its own. Today, vodka represents 8 to 10 per cent of total annual sales of 235 million gallons of distilled spirits in the U. S. It outsells all types of distilled spirits except domestic whiskey and gin.

To some in the liquor industry, these trends may be disturbing but not to Martin. (Heublein has a leading vodka brand, also is an aggressive promoter of prepared cocktails.) "Don't forget that worldwide, vodka is by far the most popular distilled spirit," he emphasized over and over. "The United States is a 'Johnny - come - lately' to vodka.

It won't be because of any pre - New Year's resolution that more Americans will be more moderate in their drinking. This is a long - term trend, a healthy one in every sense of the word.

Social drinking is becoming increasingly acceptable in our nation and a social drinker, by definition, doesn't have one too many often. "In the 1930s, because of Prohibition, total gallonage was small but those who did drink, drank feverishly", Martin recalls. "During wartime, consumption in this country set a record high. Today, social drinking is a normal part of social life."

Another force behind the trend is the life - long exposure of today's young adults to social drinking. "They've seen their parents and their parents' friends drink since they were war babies. Young people, particularly, drink more moderately than a generation or two earlier."

The influence of women is a most significant factor. The estimate is women drink one - third the amount consumed by men and their influence is felt in the way they discourage heavy drinking as well as in the way they encourage the choice of spirits.

Finally, the industry itself has made "moderation" a major campaign, especially at this season of peak consumption.

Actually, there's nothing extraordinary about our changing habits and tastes. During the past 100 years at one time, Irish whiskey outsold Scotch by 25 to one. Cognac was the drink of the world at another, rye outsold bourbon at a third. That adds perspective to Martin's startling forecast that "some day vodka will outsell whiskey in this country."

That, though, is the future. For the present, I offer you the consolation that if you begin the next workweek with a monumental hangover, in comparison, you're a shining example of moderation. Bottoms up!

How Do You Stand, Sir?

By BARRY GOLDWATER

U. S. Senator From Arizona

A friend of mine has stopped smoking every New Year's Day for the past 25 years. In fact, he admits rather ruefully that it's easy to stop smoking; he's done it a hundred times.

New Year's resolutions are as American as pumpkin pie, turkey on Thanksgiving and the feeling most of us have of pride in our country.

At this New Year's season, it is my fervent wish that the people of this land might resolve to express once again that loyalty to the cause of freedom which created this nation.

Let us resolve once more to do our own thinking and make our own decisions. I hope that all who read these words will resolve to review them with skepticism, for certainly my conclusions may be erroneous, and it is your responsibility as an individual sovereign American citizen to acquaint yourself with the facts and then reach a decision.

For 20 years, in my opinion, and perhaps longer we have drifted. We have been diverted from our national purpose by eloquent voices preaching the guilt and failures of America. We have indulged in wishful thinking. We have accepted the suggestion that all men everywhere share our common aspiration for peace — that all men, if material surroundings could be slightly more propitious, would demonstrate good will toward mankind and subject themselves to the restraints which are the basis for man's ability to live with his neighbor at peace.

You and I, as citizens of the United States, are not charged with any responsibility for reforming all the world. We are, rather, required to view 20th-century man, his institutions, his political and economic creation critically and skeptically.

We do have, I believe, an obligation for our brothers, but this sense of obligation is distorted and perverted when we exercise it by employing force and compulsion against our neighbors in order to help our neighbors.

In the arena of world nations, we are required, I believe, to grant to others the same sovereignty we seek for ourselves, but we must not endanger the magnificent freedom of America in a rosy glow of wishful thinking.

This union was formed, in the first place, "to establish justice" justice for the residents of this portion of this continent — "insure domestic tranquility" — this clause cannot be stretched to encompass imposing our notions of tranquility by force on our fellow man — "provide for the common defense" — and certainly this requirement suggests defense against both the cold and hot wars — "promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty for ourselves and our posterity."

SHORTS

BATTLE OF THE SEXES — The long - smouldering controversy over the right of women reporters to cover the appearance of prominent guests before the all-male National Press Club has spilled over into the White House. One of the gals asked President Kennedy personally to intervene. But Kennedy, with great wisdom, adopted a hands - off policy. The Press Club has a standing rule of trying to accommodate a limited number of lady reporters by granting them space in the balcony. But they cannot dine, nor can they submit written questions the speaker. Press Club President John P. Cosgrove, backed into a corner, advised his fellow club members: "As expressed previously, the NPC policy on luncheon addresses will prevail. It is not only fair, but the only way to continue the National Press Club as a free and open forum. In the words of St. Paul, I commend the 4,826 members of the NPC to be on the watch, stand fast in the faith; be a man; be full of courage."

SURPRISE, SURPRISE — When former Rep. Brooks Hays of Arkansas was sworn in at the White House as special assistant to the President some 30 of his friends and family were on hand for the ceremony. This included his 95 - year - old mother-in-law, Mrs. Gila Prather. In a short talk afterwards, Hays commented: "Behind every promotion there is a proud wife and a surprised mother-in-law. And my mother-in-law is surprised. She thought I would become President."

APATHY ON CIVIL DEFENSE

We can't understand the apathy found among some people and politicians toward a survey for the Civil Defense needs of the Twin-Cities area. If ever a survey was needed, this one is — yet too many people use every excuse in the world to keep one from being made.

Recently, a group of public-minded citizens banned together and named a committee in an effort to obtain a survey. All this group has met with generally has been evasive promises and maybes.

Total cost of the project has been estimated at $25,000. It might not even be this much. And in addition, there is a good chance that the federal government would help finance a project of this nature. It might be pointed out that federal funds for such a survey would not be receiving federal aid in the general sense.

Of all the governmental bodies in this area, only the Monroe City Council has positively promised to put up its share of the cost. The others involved have been evasive and have suggested that such a survey be done by a group or individuals who know nothing about the requirements for this area in case of a heavy fallout attack.

The survey needs to be conducted immediately and it needs to be headed up by someone who knows something about nuclear war and fallout. To fall back on the state civil defense group would be a case of the blind leading the blind. Although well-intended, we are sure, the state group has neither the equipment nor the personnel to go into each area of the state and work out that section's needs. Neither does the federal government. So this vital protection—if any is going to be provided—will have to be done by the residents of the areas involved.

To pass off such a vital need as "well, I don't think we'll ever need it," is pretty shallow reasoning.

Certainly, it is to be hoped that we never have the need for fallout shelters—but the chances are a 100 to one that we will. We are not being pessimistic when we say that, but the facts and history, if you care to read them, show that either we will one day have to fight the Communist or sit tight and let them take us over.

Many of the people who today are blocking the survey would hesitate a minute to spend much more on a project that wouldn't do half as much good if they figured that project would get them a few votes.

We realize that some of the people who have not committed themselves are sincere in their beliefs. But we believe if they will take a logical view of the situation, they will come to the realization that a survey is vital now and will act.

In this connection, it might be well for the Ouachita Parish school board to consider fallout shelters in any new buildings it is now planning with the recently approved $7,000,000 bond issue.

WHAT'S WRONG IN WASHINGTON

Millions of Americans are today more puzzled than ever about the way our government conducts its affairs, particularly in the foreign policy field. In fact, many of us would really like to know what our foreign policy is and we think the President should explain it to the American people — if he can.

A good example is the United Nations attack on Katanga — the only pro-West group in the black Congo.

In fact, no international event has so aroused Capitol Hill as has the UN aggression against Tshombe's autonomous government in the Congo. It appears to us that Senator John Tower, Republican from Texas, has summed up the situation better than anyone. He said:

"The UN, an organization ostensibly dedicated to peace, is conducting unprovoked warfare in the Congo. The fight . . . there is an internal affair of a UN member nation. This civil strife poses no threat to any outside nation or to world peace. The Katanga government has the overwhelming support of a majority of its citizens, as evidenced by their support of its defensive effort. Therefore, military intervention by the UN is unjustified, illegal and immoral.

"The U. S. government's support of this military venture is an incredible act in view of the free capitalistic and orderly government of Katanga — the kind of government generally thought to be the idea of western civilizations. Instead of supporting this UN military action, the U. S. government should be opposing it with all the influence at our disposal."

For once in memory, the Russians were in favor of an intervention by the UN. That in itself should have told us something was wrong. In other words, the Russians wanted the Katanga government destroyed simply because it opposed Soviet interest. How stupid can our policy makers get?

Another example is described by Human Events on the subject of how President Kennedy conducts diplomacy — the untold story.

Correspondents in Bonn and Paris report vivid details about the parleys of the past month concerning Berlin, which show that MacMillan of Britain and President Kennedy still intent on appeasement ventures, only relenting when they collide with the immovable de Gaulle. The Human Events correspondents report as follows:

"German diplomats who attended the Adenauer - Kennedy talks in Washington recently describe JFK as "crushed under a weight of responsibilities, showing no constructive imagination of his own, apparently following the lead of aides Walt W. Rostow and McGeorge Bundy.

These sources present the following scene in the Washington parleys: Kennedy assured Adenauer and his aides that the U.S. would not let West Germany down and would fight to the bitter end for allied rights in Berlin as well as for the lines of communication between West Berlin and the west.

Then Rostow cut in: "You understand, Mr. Chancellor, that in all negotiations there must be give and take. So to induce the Russians to guarantee our essential demands we must give them something in exchange — as a face - saver. We think we should make Berlin a world center of education and culture and put the UNESCO headquarters there. Bonn therefore would have to make a trivial concession: it would have to sever present political ties between west Berlin and the Federal Republic of Germany, including the six seats held by Berliners in the Bundestag in Bonn. After all, they have no voting rights in the Bundestag."

At this, Chancellor Adenauer and his aides gasped. Der Alte then reminded Kennedy that the rights of West Berlin as a political entity in the Federal Republic of Germany were provided in the constitution which was approved by the allies before it was passed by the German legislature. Hence this suggestion by Rostow would necessitate a change in the Constitution which, in view of the present mood of the German people, would be disastrous to any German government. In fact, Adenauer added, no party in the republic would dare suggest such a change, unless the Federal Republic became a dictatorship.

Kennedy looked at Rostow, who nodded to him, and the U. S President replied to the Chancellor that this change suggested by Rostow must be made if "we want to get anywhere and to avoid a holocaust."

Back in Bonn, these German diplomats believe that JFK plans to have a conference at the foreign ministers level with the Russians (with or without de Gaulle) to deal only with Berlin. Then the British and Americans will make great claims (illusory) that Khrushchev has made "concessions" — in short, a well-advertised "victory" (like those claimed after Teheran, Yalta and Potsdam). Kennedy will be pictured as the man who saved the world from bloodshed, and the Democratic party will run on that in the November, 1962, elections. If he succeeds and has a pliant Congress, then and then only will he return to a big summit with the Russians.

And de Gaulle? Our Paris correspondents report (and this is confirmed in Bonn) that Adenauer sent word to the French President asking him to let the French Foreign Minister go to the conference, since Germany needed "one friend" to speak for Bonn. De Gaulle, after pondering this, sent back word that it would be "foolish" to attend the meeting. "Let the Anglo - Saxons bear the onus," he said. But Paris reports that talk among German diplomats, now in despair, has again revived the possibility of a unilateral deal between Bonn and Moscow.

THE PATRIOTIC CORPS

An encouraging event occurred recently at Yale University. We didn't see anything about it on the AP or UPI, both of which can be considered unusual to say the least in their interpretation of what is news.

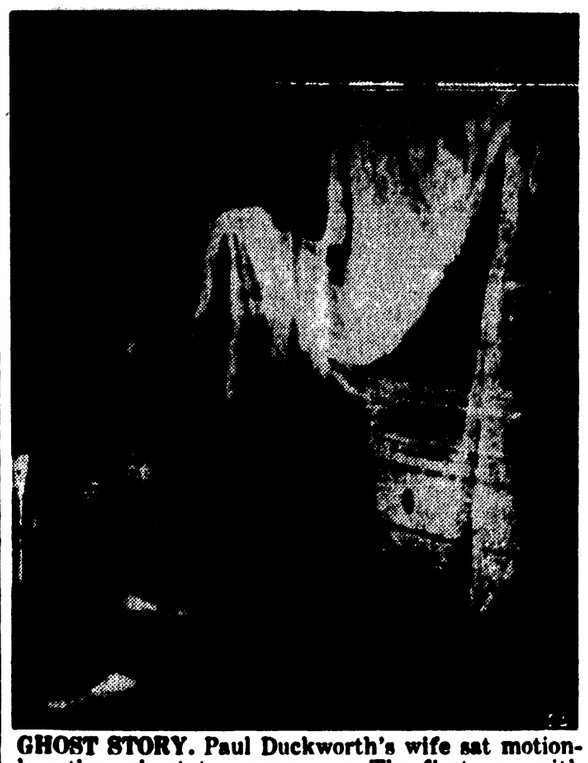
The event we are talking about is the fact that members of the Yale chapter of Young Americans for Freedom — a national organization claiming 20,000 members — offered to go to Katanga to fight against UN mercenaries seeking to bring the province under control of the heavily Red infiltrated central Congolese government.

The students, according to a state department spokesman, would not have violated any law had they gone and fought for Katanga, but would have run the risk of loss of citizenship.

A spokesman for the group said the students "had hoped to dramatize to the American people that the UN and the Kennedy administration are embarked upon a course that could be as tragically wrong as was the State Department support of Castro when he was seeking control of Cuba."

A Republican congressman said of the students: "This is the stuff our forefathers were made of. Why don't we dub them the Patriotic Corps. It would serve a far better purpose than the spineless Peace Corps which is only getting the U. S. into trouble."

As far as we're concerned, we would like to see a chapter of this organization formed in this area. It would be a worthwhile effort and would help to teach our young people the true meaning of freedom; they aren't getting enough of it in our schools today.



GHOST STORY. Paul Duckworth's wife sat motionless throughout two exposures. The first one, with the 'ghost' in position, was shot at half the necessary exposure, 1/30 at f/5.6. The apparition moved out of the scene and it was shot again at the same speed. The ghostly result is in "Experimental and Trick Photography" by Duckworth.

Camera Notes

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Photography is a field in which the boundaries are limited only to that area determined by the photographer himself. It is an activity in which a camera fan can cut loose and let himself go, especially when the motive power is sparked by imagination and ingenuity. All that's required is: a) the desire to get off the beaten path; b) the effort to try camera and darkroom tricks, and c) the willingness to experiment with — and possibly waste — film, paper and some time.

It would also help to have a handy guide such as Paul Duckworth's "Experimental and Trick Photography" (Universal - Amphoto Books, New York, $1.95).

Here you'll find in simple, readable format about 60 photo projects to choose from. Each one is explained in a two - page spread: On one page the experiment is described; facing it is the finished picture with the details of its accomplishment.

To duplicate the limited facilities and equipment of most amateur photographers, the author used his living room as a studio, a closet as a darkroom for loading film, two bridge tables to hold the processing trays, a desk lamp covered by a safelight filter and the bathtub for washing prints. Duckworth's wife proved to be a most cooperative model and he also used his child, relatives and friends.

Experimental and trick pictures can be made in the camera itself or prduced later through darkroom magic.

When done directly in shooting, it involves such processes as double and multiple exposures, movement or panning with the camera, shooting through patterned glass and selective focus.

When creative pictures are produced through darkroom hocus - pocus, the methods might be solarization, reticulation, has reliefs, photograms, printing through patterened screens, glass textures or petroleum jelly smears and sandwiching negatives together.

Some extremely effective impressionistic results are achieved by shooting through patterened glass such as that found on shower stall doors. A piece about 16 by 20 inches, picked up from a glass cutter's workshop, can be suspended in front of the camera. Models or still life objects must be posed quite near the glass. Light should hit the subject without shining on the glass itself, so the lamps are positioned at either side of the glass. The effects are even more impressive and modernistic in color.

Deliberate double exposures against a black background can produce unique pictures when the idea behind the component parts are imaginatively conceived and carefully posed. Illustrating this idea, Duckworth shot a close - up of a man and his hand first, then a tiny figure of girl. The combination looked like a giant holding a Lilliputian in his hand. In the same way, a person might be put into a gallon jar or a bird cage.

Modern cameras, with their double - exposure prevention devices, might make it difficult to produce these effects on one negative. Sometimes the camera manuals explain how deliberate double exposures may be made. Otherwise, the two pictures can be taken separately and the negatives sandwiched together to produce the same effect.

With these ideas as a guide, trick photography can be a challenge . . . and great fun.

Chances are the menacing pose assumed by Nehru against Goa and the other two Portuguese states — which is in remarkable contrast to his spineless position taken against Red China, which claims no fewer than 51,000 square miles of Indian territory — could not have occurred, it is felt, without state department acquiescence or connivance. Under Eisenhower, it is recalled, Dulles refused to pander to Nehru's colonialism and firmly declared that Goa was part of Portugal, thus checkmating the spineless so and so. His so - called victory in Goa is seen as a win for the ADA-type extremist clique now controlling the cerebral environment in the State Department. This extremist element has consistently waged war against Portugal for the purpose of catering to anti-Western neutralists in India and Africa. Word For The House Is Morbid

THE HOUSE ON THE HILL. By Cesare Pavese. Translated from the Italian by W. J. Strachan. Walker & Co. $3.95.

There is a despairing air about this novel, written by a man who won Italy's Strega prize in 1950 and a few days later killed himself.

It is a story told by a school teacher, approaching 40 years of age, who lived in and about Turin, Italy, in the latter days of World War II, when the facist government had fallen and the country was a battleground for the Allied Powers, the Germans and the partisans.

If the story had been told by a warmblooded, rational man, it doubtless would have been entirely different from the present tale. The teacher who tells the story would by most standards be considered a cowardly, introspective creature who was unable to face up to marriage or vicarious fatherhood, let alone the warfare which interrupted his creepy approach to life. But since there was a war going on, he is shown in a psychopathic attitude toward his fellow men, toward himself and toward the scarcely mentioned issues of the conflict.

This is a curious war which swirls about the self-centered teller of this tale. He is able to take his tea or wine in the town or the hills and torment himself with his relationships with a spinster landlady, without feeling any of the emotions of war.

Stamp News

The 4-cent New Mexico Statehood commemorative stamp scheduled for issuance on Jan. 6 depicts a view of a mesa known as "Shiprock" located in northwestern New Mexico. The first day site is Santa Fe.

The design which underwent several revisions was based on an illustration from a magazine and furnished by the Central Library of the Department of the Interior. The designer of the stamp was Robert J. Jones. The colors are blue and brown.

Collectors desiring first day cancellations of the 4-cent New Mexico Statehood commemorative may send their addressed envelopes, together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, Santa Fe, N. M. The outside envelope to the Postmaster should be clearly marked "First Day Covers New Mexico Statehood Stamp."

First day cover requests must be postmarked not later than Jan. 1, 1962.

To mark the historic event of becoming an independent nation, Tanganyika issued a set of 12 new postage stamps. All the adhesives bear a burning torch motif inspired by a speech given by Julius Nyerere, Tanganylika's first prime minister. The designs also include the word "Uhuru" (Freedom), the date and the name "Tanganyika."

The designs feature the following: a school, district nursing service, coffee picking, maize picking, Tanganyika flag, Serengeti Lions, maternity and child welfare, Mount Kilimanjaro and torch, Dar-es-Salaam Harbor, agricultural development, diamond mine and Rose Pink Diamond.

West Germany has issued a new commemorative stamp honoring Wilhelm Emanuel Freiherr von Ketteler, famous pioneer in the field of social reform, reports the World Wide Philatelic Agency. The 10 pfennig stamp commemorated the 150th anniversary of his birth and the design features his portrait. Von Ketteler was born on Dec. 25, 1811 and died on July 13, 1877. As Bishop of Mainz he is remembered for his work in social development.

A special issue of four stamps was issued by Sierra Leone to honor the visit to that country by Queen Elizabeth. The 3 pence shows Royal Charter 1799; 4 pence Kings Yard Gate, Freetown 1817; 76 pence Old House of Representatives, Freetown 1924; one shilling 3 pence the yacht H. M. Brittania at Freetown. All values also contain the Queen's portrait.

Osborn Delves Into Psychic Research Here

THE FUTURE IS NOW. By Arthur W. Osborn. University Books. $6.

In the beginning, this book is about "precognition," that mystic experience which seems to foresee future events. It is a phenomenon related to telepathy and clairvoyance, and like them it is a part of the field now known as parapsychology.

American readers are more or less familiar with J. B. Rhine's researches related to this field, and there is a growing literature on the subject. Osborn, an Australian, has devoted his attention to the most difficult and inexplicable feature of psychic research, the one which cuts across the time barrier into the future.

He recites a number of case histories in order to establish the basic characteristics of these phenomena, and then considers the various hypotheses for explaining them—the ideas of serial time, four-dimensional space, non-physical beings, and others.

From there he expands into the related philosophies of the Orient — particularly of India — and brings out the concept of a mystic experience as a guide to the final understanding of reality.

And lastly, he delves into the idea of "the universe as a conscious Whole," in which man participates as a mental pattern forming part of the universe itself. Before he has finished, he has suggested a way of life.

Osborn's approach is not too technical for a reader who has some acquaintanceship with the basic language of psychology and philosophy, but on the other hand he gets into deeper waters than many readers can follow. His book is of interest chlefly to those who like to venture into the deep waters, whether for the thrill or the enlightenment.

Short Novels, Other Stories In Anthology

SUCCESSFUL LOVE, AND OTHER STORIES. By Delmore Schwartz. Corinth Books. Distributed by Citadel Press. $4.50.

There are two short novels that have not seen print and six short stories that have appeared in magazines, in this anthology of Schwartz's fashionable writings, which apparently are intended to fit a mid-century age of calculated bewilderment.

The title piece is about a bird-brained young female who wants to become a woman of the world at the earliest opportunity, imagining that she can achieve this goal by going to bed with an equally bird-brained young male. This is supposed to be significant.

There also is a story, called "The Hartford Innocents," about a dither created at a college for women by a student who brings an abandoned child to the campus, a mulatto child at that.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

New Trend In Publishing World Are Paper Backs

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

One of the new trends in the publishing world is the large number of very worthwhile books, which are now being published in paper back editions. Libraries are confronted with the problem of whether to buy them or not. Cataloging and processing books is an expensive process and we do not feel justified in spending the time and money on a book which will last only for a few circulations. This fall one of the Library Binderies has come out with a new process which is of great value to libraries. They take these paper bound books and rebind them in a form, called Permabound, which they guarantee to last for 50 circulations, or two years. They selected a number of books, which were out of print in hard bound editions and which they thought libraries would need. They bound them in this Permabound process and offered them to libraries at a resonable price. We bought two complete sets of these book and have put them in circulation. The response from the library patrons has been excellent. Only one person has said that she didn't like them. They are easy to handle, easy to carry and they have material which cannot be obtained from any other source.

Today I want to tell you about some of the titles which we have in this Permabound edition. First let's look at the field of fiction. By Willa Cather there is a collection called "Five Stories." "Mark Twain, a Laurel Reader" is a collection of the short stories of Samuel L. Clemens. There are three collections by Joseph Conrad "The Hoosier School-Master" by Edward Eggleston is an old classic which has long been out of print.

By William Faulkner we have "The Unvanquished" and by F. Scott Fitzgerald "Babylon Revisited and Other Stories." There is a copy of Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Marble Faun" and Emerson Hough's "North of 36." Mackinlay Kantor is represented by "Frontier" and "Silent Grow the Guns" and there are collections of stories by other authors, such as Robert Louis Stevenson, Leo Tolstoy and Alexander Pushkin.

There was only one book in the field of psychology and nothing in religion, but the field of social science was represented by several titles. "The Basic Ideas of Alexander Hamilton" by Richard Morris is very valuable. There are two titles by George Soule "The Shape of Tomorrow" and "Men, Wages and Employment in the Modern U.S. "The living U.S. Constitution" by Baul K. Padover will be most useful. In the field of art there were twelve titles ranging from "Primitive Art" to "Picasso." Especially useful will be Alfred Ward's "Enjoying Paintings" and E. O. Christensen "The History of Western Art."

Literature is especially strong in this collection. There are collections of plays, short stories and science fiction. There are books of poetry by Whitman and T. S. Eliot. There are collections of essays by Emerson, Shaw and Mencken. There are three different critical studies of the works of Shakespeare and we never have enough of these. There are collections of short stories from the French, German, Italian, Russian and Chinese.

History is well represented. There are two excellent titles in the field of archaeology; "The Anvil of Civilization" by Leonard Cottrell and "Digging Up the Past" by Leonard Wolley. There are several excellent books about the ancient Incas, Mayas and Aztecs. These books are very well written and add much to our knowledge of the early settlers of Central and South America.

The field of biography is well-covered in this collection of books. There are biographies of Alexander the Great, Winston Churchill, Cleopatra, Clarence Darrow, Sigmund Freud, Andrew Jackson, Stonewall Jackson, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln, Sir Isaac Newton, Midhel Montaigne and many others. We feel that these books will be most useful in the library collection and we hope that you, the patrons will enjoy them. In fact we are so pleased with the books that we are ordering others in the same binding.

RUNNING THE SCALES

From Folk Idiom To Opera Stages

By JOHN CALE

With the heavier attractions lined up for February and March, the local concert world will break a mid-winter lull with the appearance of a ballad singer January 15 on the Northeast Concerts series.

Earl Spicer, a popular singer of folk music, has entertained college and university audiences from coast to coast. So far as we can recall, this is the first time a solo ballad singer has been slated on the culture circuit here.

Marvin Solley, tenor, from Louisville Ky., will be at Louisiana Tech for one performance only on January 8.

FOLK SCHOOL

The appearance of a bonafide folk singer calls for some definition so that the singer can come along and make the definitions look foolish. Joking aside, many persons see a picture of a folk singer with a guitar or maybe a group with several fiddles and a guitar and reason that folk music fits the hillbilly category.

There is as much difference in the two as a launching pad and a rocket, especially if the rocket made a big noise and didn't go anywhere. Folk music may have been at the bottom of the hillbilly trend at one time. But in trying to climb the ladder of prosperity, makers of hillbilly music tried to ignore the more solid values of the older and wiser folk tunes.

Folk music draws from a wide range of emotions and experiences from household chores all the way to murder. The greater part of hillbilly lyrics stem from love which came close but got away.

In this respect, some pretty good hillbilly classics have come into being such as the one about the girl who went in for social climbing after she ditched her first lover. "Pick Me Up On Your Way Down," sings the fellow who was dropped off at a lower social rung.

VIA NOSE

The language of folk music is the dialect of the district where the songs grew into existence. In the mountains of Tennessee, Kentucky, and North Carolina some of the dialects have a slight nadal tone. When country music grew into a business back in the early days of radio, performers affected this sound far beyond its original character.

In fact, hillbilly music makers—as the business skyrocketed in record sales and the era of television—seemed to say to sponsors and listeners: "You're paying through your noses, we'll sing through ours."

OPERA

The subject matter of hillbilly songs—love in two or three syllables—will be evident in the operas slated for the remainder of this season in Shreveport and points west.

Fort Worth has slated a run of Puccini's "Madam Butterfly" at Will Rogers Auditorium on January 17 and 19.

Then on January 29, the Shreveport Opera Association will join forces with the Houston Grand Opera Association for a performance of "Lucia di Lammermoor" at Shreveport's Municipal Auditorium.

San Antonio will open its opera season in February and in May, the Metropolitan Opera tour through Dallas for a one week's stand.

The ever-popular "Carmen" is slated for a performance in March by the New Orleans civic opera group.

It seems the mad scene in "Lucia" is still drawing audiences to that opera after more than 110 years since its original first night. Why? Because the heroine, a Scottish lass singing in Italian, was forced to marry a duke she didn't love. So she killed him and sang a song about it.

If this theme is packing in the audiences to opera houses, the hillbilly writers could come up with a paraphrase featuring the dying duke vocalizing, "I knew you loved another, sweet Lucy."

The two idioms aren't so far apart.

Paul Butler, Former Demo Leader, Dies

WASHINGTON (AP)—A heart attack Saturday ended the life of Paul M. Butler who served a stormy 5½ years as national chairman of the Democratic party. He was 56.

Butler, who stepped down from the party chairmanship in the summer of 1960, was stricken at George Washington University Hospital and died within minutes after the attack.

He had been admitted to the hospital Dec. 5 for treatment of a cold and had seemed to be making satisfactory recovery from a respiratory infection complicated by diabetes from which he had suffered for many years.

Since his retirement from politics, Butler had been practicing law from offices here but acquired the cold while trying a case in his old home town of South Bend, Ind.

A volatile and emotional man who was quick to anger, Butler was in public conflict with members of his own party about as often as with the Republicans. Yet his tenure as Democratic chairman was the longest of modern times except for the eight years served by James A. Farley in the Franklin D. Roosevelt era.

When he resigned after the 1960 national convention, Butler was succeeded by Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington. Jackson resigned after the presidential inauguration and the present chairman, John M. Bailey of Connecticut, took over.

At Palm Beach, Fla., where he is spending the holidays, President Kennedy expressed his grief and called Butler "a courageous leader of the Democratic party during some of the party's most difficult hours."

The slender, prematurely gray Butler was an intense man for whom political leadership was a deadly serious, around-the-clock job. A dedicated liberal, he frequently was in conflict with the more conservative members of his party. Partly because of his opposition to segregation, he was anathema to a great many Southern congressmen and other Dixie party leaders.

Butler clashed frequently with House Speaker Sam Rayburn and Rayburn's fellow Texan, Lyndon B. Johnson, when Johnson was the party's Senate leader.

Butler helped earn his way way through the University of Notre Dame by working as a reporter for the South Bend Tribune. He graduated in law in 1927 and entered into politics at once in the party-management end rather than as a candidate for public office.

Butler worked his way through the ranks as precinct chairman, county chairman and district chairman and finally reached the top level in 1952 when he ousted Frank McHale as national committeeman for Indiana.

He won the national chairmanship in a fiercely fought contest in 1954 and held it until his voluntary retirement.

Married in 1934 to Anne S. Briscoe, Butler was the father of two daughters, Mrs. J. Patrick O'Malley, South Bend, and Mrs. William Morely, Indianapolis, and three sons, Paul M. Jr., a law student at Duke University, Kevin, a University of Chicago student, and Brian, a Notre Dame student.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete late today but services and burial will be in South Bend.

Sound Gains In Economy Are Forecast

By STERLING F. GREEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges forecast Saturday a new year of "sound economic progress" with substantial gains in sales, incomes and job opportunities.

"If we can maintain relative stability of the general price level, these gains will spell greater prosperity and well-being for all Americans," the secretary said in a year-end statement.

Hodges reported that national output, which stood at a recession low of $501 billion in the first quarter of this year, has climbed to $540 billion or better in annual rate. It should hit a rate between $565 and $570 billion in the April-June quarter of 1962, he predicted.

The secretary used the traditional New Year's statement as a vehicle for reviewing economic gains made since the recession of last winter and for scanning the outlook for 1962.

The still greater utilization of plant capacity which is foreseeable, he cautioned, could "lower the current resistance of the economy to inflationary pressures. This is all the more reason to exercise restraint in wage demands, pricing policies and government spending throughout the new year," he said.

Hodges called for greater stress on modernization of the nation's industrial plant, more business investment in research and development of new products, re-doubled sales efforts and greater participation by American companies in export trade.

"The deficit in our international balance of payments will continue to be a problem in the new year," the secretary said. "We must be unremitting in our efforts to increase our trade surplus—the amount by which our exports exceed our imports—to offset the dollar outflows that result from our overseas military and foreign aid obligations and from private investment in other countries."

Weekly Cotton Contract Prices In Narrow Range

NEW YORK (AP) — Contract prices of cotton for future delivery rose and dipped in a narrow range throughout the week and closed the same way—50 cents a bale higher to 50 cents a bale lower.

The uncertainty was attributed to a number of factors: commission house and local selling, liquidation, switching from near to distant contracts and plain year-end evening-up.

Offerings were absorbed through short covering and commission house buying.

Although the commodity move at a progressively slower rate into the government loan, it apparently had little influence on the market.

Total pledges through Dec. 22 were 3,791,000 bales, or a net stock of 3,421,000 bales after deducting repossessions. In addition, some 1,470,000 bales remain of the 1960 crop, thus making government holdings of 4,891,000 bales.

Okay Project In Jackson

ANSLEY (Special) — In a communication from A. B. Ratcliff, Jr., Project Control Engineer of the Louisiana Department of Highways to Jackson Parish Representative I. J. Allen of Jonesboro, announcement was made of the status of the Ansley Church and cemetery road, and in which the Highway Department advised that the project was approved by the Director and work order issued.

The department also advised Allen that the work to be performed under the project name "Ansley Church Road," begins at junction with U. S. Highway 167 at Ansley and extends in a westerly direction for a distance of 0.6 miles to Ansley Church and Cemetery.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk has told the U.S. ambassador in Moscow to make unmistakably clear at the start of his Berlin talks with the Soviets that the West will defend its essential Berlin interests "at whatever cost."

State Department sources said cabled instructions went Friday to Moscow where Llewellyn E. Thompson hopes to begin with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko next week a new round of discussions aimed at peaceful settlement of the Berlin crisis.

Rusk himself indicated publicly Saturday the basis from which Thompson will proceed.

In a speech to the American Historical Association, Rusk spoke of a need—for the sake of avoiding nuclear war and promoting negotiations — to dispel any thought by the Reds that the Western powers can be shoved or cajoled out of West Berlin.

Rusk said President Kennedy and other Western leaders decided earlier this year "that vital interests and commitments in West Berlin, crucial to our own security, must be defended at whatever cost."

"That decision remains the basis on which we intend to explore the possibilities of a peaceful resolution of the Berlin crisis. If peace depends upon clarity, the other side must not be allowed any dangerous illusion.

"This clarity is the basis of an assurance to our own and other peoples that the possibilities of patient diplomacy will be exhausted to insure that vital interests are protected and that the other side will not be permitted to make a fatal mistake."

The Kennedy administration appears to hold only a modest hope at this time that Thompson's efforts will flower into more formal negotiations to settle the explosive German issue.

U.S. officials said it is up to Gromyko to fix the time when he will see Thompson, who is to seek an early meeting. Also, they said, the Kremlin has indicated neither publicly nor privately a retreat from its announced Berlin plan which the Western powers have found unacceptable as a basis for negotiations.

Thus it was understood that in some seven pages of instruction cabled to Thompson, the American ambassador has been told to stress again at the beginning the Western resolve—expressed to the Soviets many times before—to stand firm on Berlin rights.

DURING 1961 YEAR

Major Discoveries Made In Genetics

CHICAGO (AP)—Major discoveries in genetics—the science of heredity—was one of the most important medical research developments in 1961, the American Medical Association said Saturday.

Developments in genetics, which could lead to elimination of many diseases, was the most frequently mentioned research area by deans of the nation's medical schools responding to a survey made by the AMA.

The AMA survey of outstanding developments in medicine in 1961 also noted these research areas:

Development of drugs for the treatment of cancer.

Development of live polio vaccine, measles vaccine and perhaps a successful mumps vaccine.

Development of new dagnostic and treatment techniques involving computers and other electronic devices.

Progress in the study of hepatitis which may eventually lead to development of a vaccine. Hepatitis, a disease which attacks the liver, is the only epidemic disease still showing an annual increase in the United States.

The discovery of a relationship between abnormalities in the chromosomes and congenital defects was cited by the deans as a major advance in genetics.

Chromosomes are rod-shaped bodies that contain the genes, or hereditary factors. New knowledge of the chemical nature of chromosomes and genes, wrote one dean, should eventually enable doctors to reduce the number of birth abnormalities, genetic diseases and some types of cancer.

"The basic cancer treatments still are surgery and X ray," the AMA survey noted. "But notable progress was recorded in 1961 in the search for a drug.'" A test series with one drug showed it to be effective in arresting a rare type of cancer found in women in 50 per cent of the cases.

The survey said that although cancer is still a dangerous disease, "progress in chemotherapy (drug treatment) offers the promise of a genuine break-through in its control."

A medical research team under the direction of Dr. Joseph Boggs of Northwestern University succeeded in 1961 in isolating the virus of hepatitis

Tests on volunteers at the Illinois State Penitentiary at Joliet gave hope that from weakened doses of the virus an effective vaccine can be developed the AMA reported.

WILL VISIT INDIA

Birmingham Park Status Paradoxical

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Festive Tuesday, the public parks in this Deep South city will be closed—but they'll still be open.

Apparently both Negroes and white persons will be able to use them—but the parks won't be integrated.

The paradoxical situation developed out of Birmingham city officials' latest efforts to combat court-ordered integration.

U.S. Dist. Judge H. Hobart Grooms ruled last October that segregation in public recreation facilities—the golf courses, swimming pools, playgrounds and picnic grounds—is unconstitutional.

He set Jan. 15 as the deadline for integration.

The city commission then reacted by slashing the city parks and recreation board budget drastically, leaving little more than a shadow of the $1 million plus the board had asked.

The reduced budget wiped out most maintenance and all improvements for all but a couple of parks, leaving little doubt that they would be closed down.

The park board approved the posting of "no trespassing" signs on community center buildings. The signs started going up Thursday. The centers will be boarded up later.

But how do you close a golf course? Or an open playground?

Mayor Art Hanes went before a special meeting of the Parks and Recreation Board, of which he is a member, and moved that "no trespassing" signs also go up at the parks.

He got no second to his motion.

He made the motion again, and a second time it failed to get a second.

Obviously angered, Hanes told the board:

"In effect you've kept your parks open to integration after Jan. 15. I've told you what the city commission's wishes are and that is to post the parks. If you don't think you can work with the city commission and stomach such a decision, the commission will consider accepting any of your resignations."

None of the board members offered a resignation.

Exept for the 16 commmunity centers, which include the city's six public swimming pools, all of the city's recreation facilities apparently will be open on a first come, first served basis—minus maintenance, and minus the segregation ordinance that was overturned in federal court.

About one-third of Birmingham's population of 340,000 is Negro.

Leaders Say Business Outlook Fine For 1962

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The economic machine idled between holidays during the week but indications were that it would go into high gear when the starter's flag drops on 1962.

It had pulled out of the mire of recession in the last half of this year and seemed to have enough power to speed well into the new year.

The post-Christmas week found the automobile, steel and many other industries operating at a curtailed rate.

But all eyes were on the future. Leaders in various industries almost unanimously came out with glowing predictions for at least the first half of 1962.

"The year 1962 gives every promise of being an excellent one for business," said Frederic G. Donner, chairman of General Motors Corp.

Henry Ford II, chairman of Ford Motor Co., said, "I expect 1962 to be a solid, prosperous year for the general economy and the automotive industry."

Both expressed optimism that seven million passenger cars would be built in 1962, making it second only to 1955.

Lynn A. Townsend, president of Chrysler Corp., said: "Confidence on the part of businessmen and consumers, combined with high levels of personal income and savings, should result in sustained and stable prosperity in 1962."

On other industry fronts, Mark W. Cresap Jr., president of Westinghouse Electric Corp., predicted an increase in business for the electrical manufacturing industry, and M. L. Dye, president of the United States Savings & Loan League, forecast an increase in housing starts in 1962 over 1961.

With plants closed Monday and Saturday, auto production skidded to an estimated 103,000 passenger cars during the week, compared with 149,285 the previous week and 86,573 a year ago. Output for the year was estimated at 5,515,000 compared with 6,696,108 in 1960.

Chrysler displayed in New York City a turbine-powered car it said could use almost any liquid fuel. It plans to make about 50 or 75 available to selected customers for final tests in 1963.

Steel production tapered off after having reached a 20-month high of 2,225,000 tons during the week. The operating rate was estimated at 77 per cent of capacity.

Demand for steel was reported broadening and the supply was beginning to tighten.

An industry publication predicted 1962 production of 110 million tons, up from the 1961 total of 97 million to 98 million. It said as much as 66 million tons might be turned out in the first half to satisfy orders from users building up stockpiles as a hedge against a possible strike.

Merchants were rejoicing over what was generally agreed to be the greatest Christmas shopping season on record.

Four big Chicago mail order firms issued their spring and summer catalogues and prices were much the same as consumers paid this year.

The Commerce Department estimated construction expenditures this year at a record $67.5 billion, up 8 per cent from 1960 and 2 per cent above the previous high of 1959.

The National Association of Security Dealers warned brokerage firms against arranging excessive compensation for selling the stocks of new companies. It indicated that violators would face expulsion, which would put them out of business.

The New York Stock Exchange expressed support of the NASD's statement.

Briefly around the business scene: The 102-story Empire State Building in New York City was bought by Prudential Insurance Co. in a $65 million transaction . . . Every person in the United States had an average of 320 telephone conversations in 1960, American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reports . . . Trading on the American Stock Exchange this year exceeded the record 479,140,375 of 1929.

Giant Strides Are Made By Auto Industry

By ROBERT IRVIN
UPI Automotive Editor

DETROIT (UPI)—The auto industry has made great strides in recent years in producing cars that last longer and require fewer repairs.

At the same time, there now are more vehicles than ever on the road—about 80 million cars and 11 million trucks, according to latest registration figures.

This combination has produced a debate in the industry as to whether, overall, more automobile mechanics will be needed in the coming years.

Some industry executives say "no," reasoning that the present number of mechanics is sufficient to handle 70 million vehicles and even more in coming years.

They base this on the fact that the quality of today's cars is better and point to such strides as aluminum and ceramic mufflers and systems allowing 30,000 or more miles between grease jobs.

On the other hand, some officials claim that as cars become increasingly complex, mechanics will have to specialize more and thus more will be needed.

ASK DEALERS

To try to settle the dispute, the Automobile Manufacturers Association plans to survey dealerships to find out what kind of mechanics they need most—all-around men or specialists.

Dr. Robert Lusk, an AMA official who helps trade schools plan mechanic training programs, said he believes there are "certain areas of the country where all-around mechanics are needed."

"There undoubtedly is a shortage in small towns because working conditions and the lure of the big city take men away," he said.

Paul F. Lorenz, Ford Division's assistant general sales manager for parts and service, acknowledged there's "a great dispute in the industry on whether there's a need for more mechanics."

"I'm on the side which believes we don't need more but we do need to replace the old ones and need to train them better," he said.

Lorenz said that while there will be more and more cars on the road the improved quality will reduce the ratio of repairs required.

COURSES FOR TEACHERS

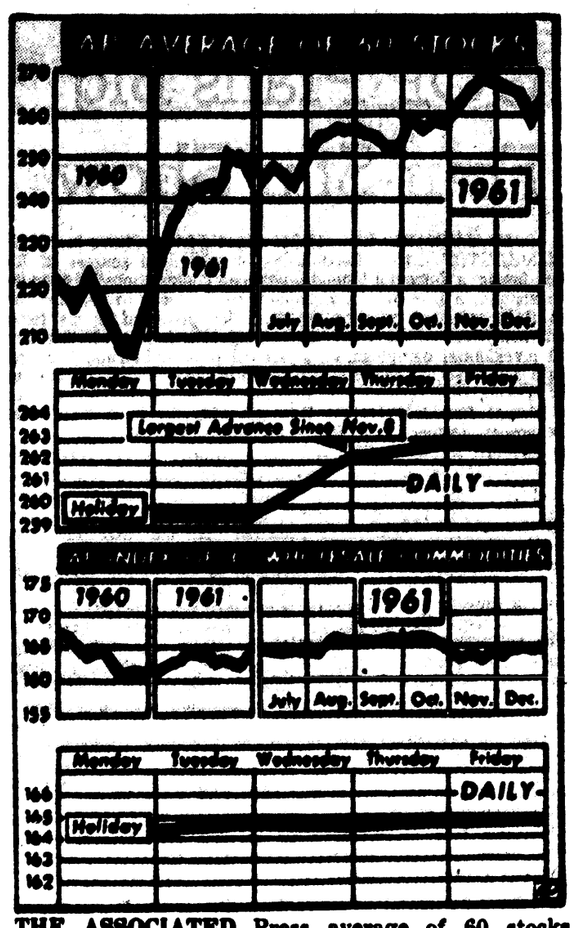
Under Lorenz, Ford has set up a program to give vocational high school teachers intensified summer courses in Ford service techniques. The teachers then go back to their own schools, select promising students and give them specialized training.

Carl T. Doman, National Ford Service Manager, said regular automobile courses in trade schools deal mainly in general theory, the fundamental operation of engines and transmissions.

Ford's program is designed to supplement Lusk's work and is held in cooperation with local dealers. Most of the students who complete the Ford program are hired by nearby dealerships.

Lusk and Lorenz made the point that becoming an automobile mechanic "isn't the bottom of the well" in a day when a large proportion of high school students aspire to college.

"The average mechanic's wage at a Detroit dealership where I take my car is $9,500 a year," Lusk said, with some mechanics making $15,000 or $16,000 a year.



THE ASSOCIATED Press average of 60 stocks finished the final week of the year higher for the first time in six weeks rising to 262.7 from 259.5 a week ago. Led by food, the commodity index rose to 164.9 from 164.3 the preceding week. (AP Wirephoto)

City In Georgia Denies Charge Of Speed Trap

LUDOWICI, Ga. (AP)—The city of Ludowici not only is not running a speed trap, says veteran Mayor J. W. Godfrey Sr., but it has liberalized its arrest policy to allow motorists a tolerance of 15 miles per hour.

The American Automobile Association said this week it has received complaints about a speed trap at the Long County city on a popular north-south route.

The AAA said the speed limit drops from 60 m.p.h. to 35 m.p.h. at the Ludowici city limits and an electric speed timer is placed so near the 35 mile sign a motorist can't slow down in time.

That's not so, says the mayor. "The timer is placed exactly half a mile from the signs at the edge of town telling motorists to reduce speed to 35 m.p.h.," he said. "If a guy can't slow down in half a mile, well, he just doesn't intend to slow down."

Godfrey also said, "We raised the speed limit in the city from 25 to 35 m.p.h. and then set a policy that motorists won't be arrested unless they are making over 50. What more do they want?"

And he added, "But I can assure all motorists—not just members of the Tripie A—that if they come whipping through Ludowici at more than 50 m.p.h., thay're going to get caught."

GUNSLINGER'S SOLITAIRE

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Western hero aspirants can play "High Noon" by themselves now.

A local firm (Taylor Engineering Co.) has produced a life - size gunslinger who challenges all comers. On command from the mechanical man, the player draws and fires his cork - shooter at the mean - looking robot.

The shooter's time is measured to the one - hundredth of a second by a timing device. The object—obviously — is to gun down the indestructible gunslinger.

DRILLING SCHEDULED

New Reservoir Seen By Experts

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Shell Oil Co. completed a Pike County wildcat the past week 1½ miles west of the Little Creek field.

The Board of Supervisors No. 1, sec. 16-4n-8e flowed 438 barrels of 40 gravity oil per day. Completion was from perforations in the Lower Tuscalooosa zone at 10,706-2 feet.

Shell was expected to begin drilling immediately on the Board of Supervisors No. 2, sec. 16-4n-8e, north offset to the new oiler. Oil experts said this may be a new reservoir separate from the Little Creek reservior.

In the McNair area of Jefferson County, Albert M. Stall prepared to begin production tests at a wildcat, the Krauss No. 1, sec. 52-8n-1e. Reports indicated the venture, with production set at 10,613 feet in the Lower Tuscaloosa zone, may be a new pool opener.

Phillips Petroleum Co. continued to swab an Adams County wildcat, the Stowers No. 1, sec. 25-8n-2w, after perforating a sand in the Lower Tuscaloosa at 10,039-56 feet. Small diameter casing was set to 10,100 feet to test the commercial worth of shows.

In Smith County, Triad Oil and Gas Co. ran a formation tester at 12,472 feet in a closely watched wildcat, the Sullivan No. 1, sec. 7-10n-15w. The wildcat, with a contract depth of 13,500 feet, is located between the Magee Field and the recently discovered Summerland field.

Justiss-Mears Oil Co. was below 11,400 feet in an Amite County wildcat, the Bates Heirs No. 1, sec. 4-2n-8e, about two miles south of the East Fork field.

Pure Oil Co. resumed drilling below 5,000 feet in a Kemper County wildcat, the Henry No.1, sec. 4-2n-8e, about two miles south of the East Fork field.

Pure Oil Co. resumed drilling below 5,000 feet in a Kemper County wildcat, the Henry No. 1, sec. 15-12n-15e, after cementing conductor casing to 4,940 feet. The venture is scheduled to 15,000 feet.

Victor Smith has set small diameter casing in a Jefferson County wildcat, the Wood No. 1, sec. 7-10n-12e, to evaluate commercial worth of oil shows logged at 9,346 feet.

Field drilling the past week brought three new oilers.

At Pool Creek in Jones County, Texaco Inc., completed its foote No. 1, sec. 15-9n-10w, as a dual producer. A sand in the Rodessa at 10,710-86 feet flowed 565 barrels of oil per day. The Hosston Zone at 11,356-408 feet flowed 358 barrels of oil daily.

Texaco's No. 2 Foote, sec. 15-9n-10w, was completed as a single producer. The Rodessa sand at 10,664-78 feet flowed 663 barrels of oil per day.

ONLY FIVE COMPLETIONS

Oil, Gas Field Activity Slowed During Holidays

New activity in the Monroe Oil and Gas District, falling between two holidays, slowed to a walk over the past week.

District Manager Duncan S. Cook reported to the Morning World only five completions during the period, representing wells completed or placed in production for the first time.

Only eight new locations were listed as staked throughout the area, composed of fields in 14 north Louisiana parishes. Ordinarily about twice as many could be expected.

LaSalle and Catahoula Parishes each accounted for two of last week's completions. There was one in Jackson Parish in the Calhoun Field. Ouachita Parish and the Monroe Field provided two of the eight locations listed.

Cook's report showed but 22 wells actively drilling or testing in the area — eight in LaSalle Parish and two in Ouachita. Inactive sites numbered 90 at week's end.

Four wells were re - completed —all in LaSalle Parish — in the West Catahoula Lake Field, the Little Creek Field, the Nebo Hemphill Field and the Olla Field. Two were units of the Placid Oil Company, one of W. H. Hunt and the fourth of the Hunt Petroleum Corporation.

FINAL ARBITER

Court Faces Issues On Oil, Union Suit

By HARRY WILSON SHARPE
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union and Sinclair Refining Co. are locked in a legal dogfight with far reaching implications.

The Supreme Court will be the final arbiter.

Among the issues is whether Sinclair can sue the AFL-CIO union for striking in alleged violation of a non-strike clause in their wage contract or whether it is a matter of compulsory arbitration.

Federal courts have differed sharply on the question, making the Supreme Court's ultimate decision a significant landmark in labor - management relations.

The dispute arose under a contract the OCAW and Sinclair signed in June, 1959, covering 1700 workers in Sinclair's East Chicago, Ind., refinery. The contract contained a no-strike clause calling for compulsory arbitration of unsettled grievances.

SHUNS PACT

In the 19-month period that followed, the refinery was struck nine times, the last time in a dispute over a total of $2.19 cents allegedly owed to three workers.

Sinclair disciplined 12 local union officers. The union denied they were in any way responsible and filed grievances on their behalf. These were thrown into arbitration but an arbitrator was never appointed.

Sinclair took the dispute to court. It charged both local and officers with breach of contract, demanded $12,500 damages, and sought an injunction prohibiting further work stoppages.

The union counter - charged the company with bad faith and asked the court to stay or dismiss the suit and to deny the injunction which it claimed be outlawed by the Norris - LaGuardia Act.

The court denied the stay and also the injunction. It also absolved the officers of responsibility for the strikes. But it held that the Taft-Hartley Labor-Management Act gave the courts authority to decide whether a union had broken its promise not to strike over arbitrable grievances.

UNION APPEALS

The local, now joined by the OCAW International Union, appealed to the Seventh U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at Hammond, Ind. This court dismissed Sinclair's demand for a cash judgment and for an injunction. But it also held that Taft-Hartley does not absolve the union for violating a no-strike pledge. It also held the union officers were accountable as "individual employees." And it ruled further that the terms of the union - Sinclair contract precluded use of an arbitrator in this particular type of dispute.

The union then appealed to the Supreme Court, again asking that the suit be quashed and that the local officers be cleared of responsibility for the strikes. It stressed that there is wide conflict in the courts over whether breach of a no - strike clause is an arbitrable issue.

"The appeals court ruling," it said, "is significant to the course of labor-management relations. It is of utmost importance to the future of collective bargaining that this court determine whether labor-management difficulties culminating in strikes and work stoppages during the term of a collective-bargaining agreement are to be mainly resolved through the judicial processes or the arbitration system."

Stock Prices In Sharp Rise During Year

NEW YORK (AP)—The "Golden Sixties" became a shining reality for Wall Street in 1961 as stock prices rose on volume of more than a billion shares—greatest turnover since 1929.

The promised harvest of the sixties — disappointingly delayed by the stock market retreat of 1960—was an abundant one indeed.

Prices soared to an extent that was alarming to some authorities and their warnings had effect in causing a temporary interruption of the advance. Disconcerting news on the foreign and domestic fronts at times also prompted temporary "corrections" but the upward march continued.

As the year ended, prices were not much below their highs and showed signs of resuming the upbeat once more.

The tremendous volume was the big stock market story of 1961.

The New York stock exchange reported volume of 1,021,264,589 shares — the biggest since the crash year of 1929 when 1,124,800,410 shares changed hands. The total compared with the 766,693,818 shares traded in 1960.

The greatest single-day total was 7.06 million shares on April 4. This was the largest since the Eisenhower "heart attack" session of Sept. 26, 1955 when 7.72 million shares changed hands.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which closed 1960 at 615.89, rose to an historic peak of 734.91 on December 13, closing the year at 731.14.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced from the 1960 close of 220.90 to a record high of 269.00 on Nov. 20 and ended the year at 262.70.

The gain from the end of 1960 to the 1961 highs was roughly 20 per cent for these averages.

The most active stock on the big board was Studebaker-Packard, rising 3⅝ to 10¾ on 11,352,800 shares.

Kennedy Takes Yacht Cruise

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—President Kennedy took another cruise Saturday aboard the yacht Honey Fitz.

The Honey Fitz cruised on Lake Worth and the inland waterway for 2 hours and 25 minutes, returning to its pier at 3 o'clock.

The weather still was on the nippy side, but there was a bright sun. Kennedy, dressed in green slacks and a red sweater, spent most of the time sitting on the stern deck.

SEW SIMPLE

By Eunice Farmer

This week's Tailor Trix winner for her fine suggestion, is Miss Janet J. Else, Storm Lake, Iowa. "Dear Eunice Farmer:

"When making machine buttonholes, in order to determine the size buttonhole you will need for a certain size button, make a sample of each size template you have on a DOUBLE STRIP of fabric. Label the size of each with ink and then cut open.

"Keep this sample strip in your sewing box for easy reference. This eliminates making several samples to check which size buttonhole template is best for the button you are using. I used the top wide hem of an old sheet and used black thread for the buttonholes."

REVERSIBLE ZIPPER

"Dear Eunice Farmer,

"I have been making a reversible felt skirt and don't know where I can purchase a zipper for this type of skirt."

Mrs. J.R.

Dear Mrs. J. R.:

The reversible zippers have not been packaged for sale through retail outlets because the demand for this style zipper is not very great. I would suggest you ask your local department store to order one for you in the color and length you will need.

USE FOR OLD HOSE

I have had many letters from all parts of the country asking what can be done with worn nylon hose besides making braided rugs. If you have a good suggestion for using old nylons, please send them on to me. The best idea will be awarded a Tailor Trix Pressing Board.

Here is a good suggestion from a reader who has already won a Tailor Trix Pressing Board:

"Two TV trays (those with legs), one at each side of my sewing chair, are a boon to my sewing "assembly line." One tray holds unstitched pieces, the other receives those pieces stitched and ready for fitting or pressing. These trays are portable and handy to place anywhere I happen to sit down to work, and I can keep my thread, buttons, scissors and other equipment on them. They are within reasy reach and never roll off these trays because of the raised edges and work much better than an ordinary table."

Mrs. C. L., Des Moines, Iowa

INTERFACE BUTTONHOLES

"Dear Eunice,

"Occasionally I like to make hand made buttonholes on fine children's clothes, or silk blouses. Have you any little tips that would make it easier to make them look neat, mine have such 'moth-eaten' edges?"

Mrs. M.M.

Dear Mrs. M.M.:

First, be sure there is some kind of light weight interfacing between the two layers of fabric. Now machine stitch a very narrow oblong, exactly the same size as the finished buttonhole. This should be done with a very short stitch and there would be no more than ⅛" between the two rows of stitching. Now cut the center and you will find the machine stitching will keep the edges firm and in shape until you can finish them by hand.

Your thread will be stronger and not tangle up if you will run it through some Beeswax before you begin the hand work.

If you'd like my leaflet on Buttonholes, send a stamped, self - addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer, in care of Monroe Morning World.

YOUR SEWING GLOSSARY:

Featherboning: this is a strip of plastic or light weight metal that is covered with fabric. It is about ½" wide and is used as a support for the bodice of bathing suits, formals, etc. It can also be used in cummerbunds to keep them from wrinkling up at the waist.

TO WIPE OUT DEFICIT

GOP Plans Big Four-Star Show

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) —Republicans, facing a financial squeeze, are planning a four-star show on Feb .1 in an effort to wipe out their hangover deficit from the 1960 presidential campaign.

In a coast-to-coast closed television hookup, GOP leaders plan to use former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, former Vice Presiden tRichard M. Nixon, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., as attractions at $100-a-plate dinners.

As the lineup now stands, Eisenhower will speak in Los Angeles, Nixon in San Francisco, Goldwater in Cleveland and Rockefeller in New York City. Closed television will carry their messages to other audiences. GOP National Chairman William E. Miller, speaking from Washington, will be master of ceremonies.

Unlike the Democrats who contro lthe White House and Congress, the Republicans found contributions hard to come by in the nonelection year of 1961.

Chairman John M. Bailey reported recently that the Democrats had raised $4.1 million for all their committees this year. Treasurer Matthew H. McCloskey has predicted the party will catch up with its deficit by mid-1962. The party hopes to raise $500,000 at a Jan. 20 inaugural anniversary dinner at which President Kennedy will speak.

There have been no comparable optimistic reports from the Republicans. They picked up about $400,000 for their Senate and House campaign committees with a Washington dinner last June at which Eisenhower spoke.

But the House campaign committee, which has poured some money into special congressional elections, is reported almost broke and the Senate committee is down to its last $20,000.

The national committee, meanwhile, has only been treading water financially, with its deficit bouncing around at about $600,000. Most of this was inherited from Nixon's unsuccessful bid for the presidency in 1960.

There has been a bit of grumbling within the regular Republican ranks that Nixon and his campaign advisers ran up bills and politely deposited them on the national committee's doorstep when the election was over and when they dissolved as a team.

This grumbling has been accented lately by reports that some of Nixon's friends have been calling on gilt-edged sources of Republican contributions all over the country for funds to help the former vice president in his forthcoming attempt to win the governorship of California. This apparently had tended to dry up some of the contributions that might otherwise have gone to the national committee.

J. Clifford Folger, Washington investment banker, remains an active Nixon financial adviser. Leonard W. Hall of New York, former national GOP chairman and a 1960 campaign director for Nixon, is circulating unofficially about the country in the former vice president's behalf.

Hall obviously would like to see Nixon get a second presidential nomination. But Nixon is downgrading that possibility so ardently at this point that he declined to go outside of California to speak on the February spectacular.

Nixon wants the presidential talk stopped so that California Democrats can't accuse him of trying to use the governorship as a stepping stone toward another presidential try.

Indonesians Are Warned By Australia

CANBERRA, Australia (UPI)— Australia warned Indonesia and the Netherlands Saturday they must settle their dispute over Western New Guinea by peaceful negotiations. It said failure to do so could mean untold years of bloodshed in the South Pacific.

Australia dispatched the unprecedented notes after receiving intelligence reports indicating that Indonesia was about to launch a series of pinprick invasions of the disputed area within the next few days.

Indonesia calls Western New Guinea "West Irian" and claims the Dutch should have ceded it to Indonesia when the islands obtained their independence. Holland says Dutch New Guinea was not included and that the Papuan natives there must eventually determine their own future.

The Australian appeal came in diplomatic notes to the governments at Jakarta and The Hague. The double notes were unprecedented in Australian diplomatic history and observers said underlined the seriousness with which Australia viewed the situation.

The Indonesian campaign against the Dutch thus far has consisted largely of threats. But reports from Indonesia, Holland and Dutch New Guinea stirred fears of a possible imminent attack.

Dutch sources in The Hague said intelligence reports indicated Indonesian forces in the Molucca Islands off New Guinea were preparing guerrilla attacks on Dutch territory for the new year. These attacks were expected to follow the pattern of attempted "armed infiltration" earlier this year by about 30 Indonesian "jungle fighters" equipped with mortars, submachine guns and grenades. The band was rounded up in two weeks.

Other reports told of a fleet of merchants ships massing off New Giunea, apparently in preparation for a landing. Indonesia armed forces and police already are on a "combat" alert.

Area Band Headed For Cotton Bowl

JONESBORO (Special) — The Jonesboro - Hodge High School Band was slated to leave this morning to participate in the Cotton Bowl festivities in Dallas, Tex. on New Year's Day.

Highlighting the festivities will be a mammoth parade which will be nationally televised. This parade will be judged and winning bands awarded first, second, and third places.

Immediately following the parade, the Jonesboro - Hodge band and chaperones will witness the Cotton Bowl Classic between Texas University and Ole Miss as guests of the Cotton Bowl Association.

Bands participating in the parade are by invitation only and will include numerous Texas bands together with one outstanding high school band from each of the four surrounding states of Arkansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Louisiana.

In a letter from Governor Jimmy Davis to Jackson Parish Representative I. J. Allen, the governor expressed his pleasure that the Jonesboro - Hodge Band had been invited and would participate in the Cotton Bowl festivities and stated that a certification would be forwarded.

Following the football game the Jonesboro - Hodge band will board chartered buses for the return trip to Jonesboro and will arrive late Monday night.

DEATH TOLL RISES

Garland Honin In Senate Race

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Garland Bonin, 49, of Lafayette will seek election to fill the unexpired term of his brother, the late Sen. Elmore Bonin of St. Martinville.

The Lafayette Parish School Board member qualified Friday night as the first candidate for the seat held by his brother, who died Dec. 6.

The parish Democratic Executive Committee met Friday night and set Jan. 5 as the qualifying deadline. Democratic primaries were set Feb. 17 and March 17. Gov. Jimmie Davis has set April 24 for the general election.

Bonin said: "It was Elmore's wish that I replace him and carry on his program and efforts. . ."

CONSUMER REPORT

Jackson Business Good During Year

JONESBORO (Special) — This story is told in a new consumer market report from New York: How did local residents and business in general make out in Jackson Parish in the last fiscal year? Surprisingly well, the latest figures show.

Consumers in the parish, armed with good incomes, showed their faces in the market place more frequently and spent with more zip than they had been doing recently.

Conservatively was the way they bought, but buy they did. As a result, most kinds of retail stores were able to beat their records of the previous year.

Reports show that Jackson Parish's retail merchants, in a year in which unemployment was high and consumers were still buying hesitatingly were able, nevertheless, to chalk up a sales volume of $13,817,000. It topped the previous year's $13,705,000.

The best gains were made by the basic products in the soft goods field, such as food, clothing, and drugs, and in the service industries. Little change was noted in hard goods purchases for autos, household appliances and the like. People tended to avoid the big-ticket items.

At the same time, because people did not spend up to the hilt, they were able to put more money into savings and into a reduction of their installment debt.

Net income in Jackson Parish, the report shows, came to $14,606,000 in the year. This was after deduction for personal taxes. It compares with $14,386,000 the year before.

In terms of the local population, it was equivalent to $2,161 in disposable income per household.

SCIENTISTS AGREE

Pranks Of Youths, Delinquency Differ

DENVER (AP)—Kids will be kids—but there is a big difference between stealing apples as a childish prank and juvenile delinquency, a panel of social scientists agreed Saturday.

If all children who stole apples at the age of six were called juvenile delinquents, the whole world would be delinquent, said Dr. Eleanor T. Glueck, Harvard Law School criminologist.

The real juvenile delinquent—the person who exhibits a persistent pattern of antisocial behavior—is often a creation of his first five or six years of life, she said.

Mrs. Glueck and other members of a panel considering juvenile delinquency at a session of the American Association for the Advancement of Science gave their views to newsmen before the session.

Donal E. J. MacNamara, dean of the New York Institute of Criminology, said that the mere exisence of special courts and police to handle juvenile delinquency was in part responsible for the rise in juvenile delinquency statistics.

He also criticized the way many of the courts handled juvenile cases. Many judgments, he said, would not stand up in adult courts because they involved violations of the Bill of Rights and the rules of evidence.

In other nations or at other times in history there have been similar outcries against juvenile behavior, he said. He cited one report of classroom behavior in New York in the 1800's which he said painted a scene comparable with "the blackboard jungle," a modern book concerned with juvenile delinquency in New York schools.

There were few recorded incidents of juvenile delinquency in Nazi Germany, he said, because certain aggressive behavior on the part of youths was acceptable in the eyes of the authorities.

Nazi youth groups, for instance, could exert their agggressiveness against Jews in the population with impunity, he said.

Mrs. Glueck said that conditions within the family in the early life of a child were often responsible for creating the juvenile delinquent. These conditions were the affections of the parent, supervision and discipline.

Some delinquency begins in adolescence, but these people are more easily straightened out than those whose problems began in early childhood, she said.

There is a real increase in juvenile delinquency, she said, especially in upper income levels, in rural areas and in girls.

In another session, Dr. C. Ray Jeffrey, Arizona State University sociologist, said that psychologists know what a system of rewards and punishments can be used to produce or eliminate behavior.

Such methods were used to train Enos, the chimpanzee that flew around the world twice in a rocket, and performed various tasks in the rocket for the reward of banana-flavored pellets, and water, and under threat of punishment from a slight shock in the foot.

Delinquents can also be retrained by a set of punishment and reward procedures, he said.

Long Urges Federal Aid For Shelters

BATON ROUGE (AP) — U.S. Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., said Saturday unless the federal government underwrites President Kennedy's proposed nationwide fallout shelter program it will fail.

Fallout shelters are part of the national defense problem, Long said in an interview, and full responsibility for protection of the populace should be borne by the federal government.

Long is preparing to attend the January session of Congress. He will remain here until Jan. 11 to welcome Secretary of the Army Elvis Stahr Jan. 10.

Stahr will be the main speaker at ceremonies honoring Gen. Troy H. Middleton, retiring president of Louisiana State University.

President Kennedy has proposed $500 million in spending to provide part of the cost of building group shelters in schools, hospitals and other community facilities.

Under the proposal, the government would bear 50 per cent of the costs and states and local governments the rest. The facilities would be operated locally.

Long said the coming session of Congress will be uneventful. since it will be an election year for Congressmen.

On other legislation, Long said: The President's aid-to-education proposal will not pass the House because of the effect of segregation and religious issues.

He doubted the Kennedy administration's medical care for the aged bill will get through either house.

He doesn't belleve the administration will seek to further liberalize civil rights laws at this session since such legislation runs in two-year cycles, usually in the first year of a new Congress.

Long said he is concerned about the President's hesitancy in using executive powers to halt federal patent giveaways and to cut interest rates.

He criticized government policy of subsidizing research and experiments by industry, then allowing patents issues on discoveries during these federally - supported programs to be gobbled up by private industry at no cost.

He contended $7 billion in patent rights are permitted to slip into private hands annually in "the biggest giveaway on earth."

The President could stop such practice with a simple order, he said, but has not moved to do so.

State Business Activity Gains

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Business activity gained substantially in November over the same month last year, a research report showed Saturday.

The general business index kept by the research division of Louisiana State University's college of business administration showed a gain of 11 per cent.

Five of six items which make up the general index showed gains. The only minus sign was employment, which dropped fractionally, .6 per cent.

OUTLOOK FOR 1962

World Leaders Give Predictions

By FRANCIS STILLEY
Associated Press Writer

When the world figuratively lifts a toast to the Christian New Year at midnight Sunday, what kind of a year will it be toasting?

Will mankind somehow find the key to settlement of its age-old differences during the next twelve months, and settle back to enjoy the long-sought fruits of peace and prosperity?

Or will 1962 be another dark year, full of foreboding, Misunderstanding and chaos—or worse still, more strife and bloodshed?

Man, of course, can make of the world what he chooses.

But men, as well as the nations in which they live, do not find it any easier now than in centuries bygone to agree upon the kind of a world they would have, despite an eternal cry for peace.

World leaders look upon the prospects with mingled emotions.

"The dangers that confronted us have in no way diminished in the last 12 months," says the revered Sir Winston Churchill, "and from us all great and sustained efforts."

To this the 87-year-old former British prime minister added in a New Year's message:

"A far-sighted unity of plan and action of the countries of the free world should be our commanding purpose. I hope and trust that speedy progress may be made towards this aim in 1962."

Expressions of other leading world figures ranged from gloom to guarded hopefulness.

America's youthful President Kennedy, in Florida to be near the bedside of his stricken father, was described as somewhat encouraged though still gravely concerned by a lack of genuine progress toward easing world tensions.

He was said to find some hope for what he calls the "grand design" of the United States to achieve a world of free nations, but does not anticipate relief from immediate tensions while Russia continues to press forecefully toward enlarging its sphere of power.

British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan pledged that "none of the disappointments and setbacks of 1961" would weaken his government's determination to work toward world peace and disarmament.

In a message to his Conservative party, he said:

"In a sadly worsened international situation I find two most encouraging factors.

"The British people in this past dangerous year showed a notable absence of panic. Cool heads in any crisis are a great asset.

"There is, too, a general realization that there are no easy shortcuts to peace, and that it would be folly to cast away the nuclear shield which has thus far kept us safe."

President Tito of Yugoslavia, a fence-sitter in the East-West struggle, saw diminishing chances for peaceful settlement of world conflicts and problems.

"The cold war dances on the brink of the abyss into which humanity could he toppled," he said.

"Chances appear less and less for a rapproachement between peaceful settlement of international problems.

"The cold war more and more is getting a permanent character in international relations and makes impossible constructive approach to most essential international conflicting problems."

Whatever the outlook, hundreds of millions of citizens in the free and Communist lands around the world prepared to welcome the New Year both with noisy hilarity and prayerful mediation.

From London came the report that Europeans on both sides of the Iron Curtain appeared headed for one of the old world's gayest celebrations with emphasis on drowning cold war jitters.

Western Europeans, blessed by an economic boom, had more money to spend than in past years and set about to do it. They could afford as much as $30 per person —with drinks extra—for a big night in London cabarets.

Elsewhere, top tabs ran to $30 in Western Germany, $14.25 in East Berlin, $40 in Paris, $10 in Warsaw, $20 in Vienna and $40 in gayer-than-ever Paree.

Swedes are expected to flock to Copenhagen, Denmark, which celebrates with a nonstop blowout lasting throughout the night and New Year's Day.

United States festivities will take many forms, ranging from revelry at $37 a head—bottled buoyants extra in Hollywood's Coconut Grove to fervent watch night services in thousands of churches.

Many a night spot across the country reported that scores of reservation seekers had to be turned away. On the other hand, many families will spend quiet evenings at home or attend private parties at the homes of others.

The traditional throng is expected to gather to shout and sing in New York's Times Square, although the crowd doubtless will be far less than the estimated million of yesteryear.

Celebrating will start a bit early in some states, where blue laws prohibit serving of liquor on Sunday. In many spots the festivities were launched last night by clubs and cafes.

Even in the Soviet Union itself, the occasion calls for a big celebration. New Year is the biggest nonpatriotic holiday of the year there. Citizens exchange gifts—and receive more from Grandfather Frost, the Soviet version of Santa Claus.

Despite the festivities on both sides of the Iron Curtain, the differences between East and West again are born out in the focal spot on the dividing line, Berlin.

Bus Drivers Arrested In Fare Dispute

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — The Birmingham Transit Co moved Saturday to end a seven month rate dispute with the city by increasing fares but police reacted by arresting drivers.

The drivers were arrested for violating a city ordinance that regulates the bus line and fares. The company claims the ordinance is unconstitutional.

Police Capt. W. J. Hailey said "three or four more drivers would be arrested during the day to get an overall picture that the rate increase was a general thing rather than on one or two lines."

He said the arrests were made by uniform officers with the rank of sergeant.

The bus line boosted the fares while Mayor Art Hanes and City Commissioners Eugene Connor and J. T. Waggoner were in New Orleans for the Sugar Bowl football game between Alabama and Arkansas.

Connor, police commissioner, said the rate increase was "a lousy, dirty trick" and he would oppose it to the Supreme Court, if necessary.

Transit company Chairman John S. Jemison Jr. said the firm had been trying since last May to get the rate increase that amounts to about five cents but attempts had "reached a stalemate" with the city.

The company raised rates earlier this year but quickly withdrew the higher fares when the city commission objected. The commission offered to hold a hearing on the dispute but the bus company refused on grounds if such a hearing were requested it would amount to recognizing the disputed city ordinance.

The company Friday asked the Circuit Court in Equity to rule on the validity of the ordinance and to give a declaratory judgement that the new fares were not unreasonable.

SERVED WASHINGTON

PIQUA, Ohio (AP) — "The last of Washington's Life Guards" rests in a tiny cemetery carved out of a forest north of Piqua.

The man who outlived the rest of General Washington's personal Revolutionary War bodyguards, a Virginia farmer named Lewis Boyer, was buried in Wesley Chapel cemetery in 1843.

IN WINN PARISH

'62 Construction Tempo Will Soar

By RAY P. EAGLES
Correspondent

WINNFIELD —Proceeding at a tempo never expected here, public and private building construction for 1962 in Winnfield and Winn Parish will reach a high that may set a record for a city of only 7,026 population in this section of the south.

Now under construction is the $750,000 new court house with a jail on top.

Other construction includes $330,000 Dodson High School expansion; $180,000 Calvin High School expansion; $146,000 additional unit to the Winnfield General Hospital; a $100,000 nursing home and $83,000 office expansion at First Federal Savings and Loan Association, and $85,000 Laurel Heights Baptist Church Auditorium.

Tremont, Olin and Hunt lumber mills continue to make additional plant improvements in their properties.

Construction will probably be started within six months on the $1.2 - million dollar new Winnfield High School plant on U. S. Highway 167 north of Winnfield city limit. Architects are now preparing plans and specifications for the school plant, which will, including the athletic field and stadium, cover a large portion of the 40 - acre site.

Two of the many buildings completed in Winnfield during 1961 are Bank of Winnfield and Trust Company - $135,000; First Presbyterian Church of Winnfield — $60,000.

Throughout Winnfield and Winn Parish, scores of new homes are now under construction, or in the planning stage, resulting in a steady demand for the services of skilled building construction craftmen, all of which adds materially to the general economy of steadily expanding Winnfield and Winn Parish.

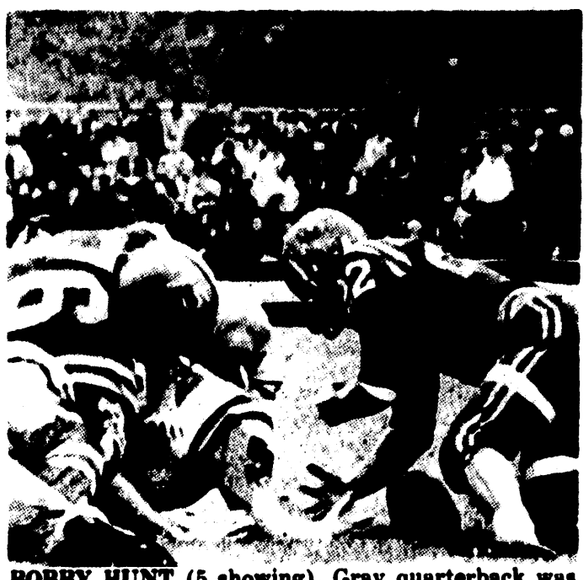
Penn State Downs Georgia Tech In Gator Tilt, Paper Claims Dietzel Inking With Army Jan. 4



BOBBY HUNT (5 showing), Gray quarterback was plaqued by fumbilists and couldn't hold on to the ball on this play and Mike McClellan (22) recovered for the Blue to erase a seven-yard gain by Hunt. The action occured in the Blue-Gray game played in Montgomery, Ala., yesterday. Blue's Nick Tingelhoff (76 of jersey) is diving over Hunt in an effort to recover the loose ball. (AP Wirephoto)

9-7 REVENGE

37-Yard Field Goal Gray Victory Edge

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — An avenging Southern all-star squad broke a three-year losing streak Saturday and rode to a 9-7 Blue-Gray gridiron victory on the toe of Butch Blume of Rice.

The 170-pound Texan who led the Southwest Conference in scoring this year put the Rebels ahead with a 37-yard field goal after a hard-charging Yankee team had held the lead for three periods.

It was the first Southern triumph in four years and gave the Confederates a 14-9 edge in the 23-year history of the intersectional contest.

	BLUE	GRAY
First downs	9	15
Rushing yardage	77	85
Passing yardage	64	80
Passes	5-13	8-22
Passes intercepted by	1	1
Punts	6-42.8	6-39.2
Fumbles lost	5	2
Yards penalized	20	45

It was the sixth field goal this year for Blume, a halfback from LaGrange, Tex., who scored 74 points for Rice during the regular season. And it more than made up for the extra point attempt Blume didn't get to make following the South's lone touchdown. A fumble by Don Fuell of Mississippi Southern kept the placekicking specialist from getting the ball away.

Dave Sarette of Syracuse scored the North touchdown and Ron Taylor of Missouri converted. Bobby Hunt of Auburn went over for the Grays.

Injuries to their two quarterbacks, Sarette and Taylor, may have cost the Yankees the game. The Northerners dominated the early part of the game, with Sarette at the controls, until he was sidelined with a shoulder injury. Then Taylor was shaken up by a blow on the head and sat out much of the game.

Sarette's pass - catching Syracuse teammate, Dick Easterly, took over the signal-calling assignment and alternated with Taylor after the Missouri back returned to the lineup. Easterly was a quarterback earlier in his college career, but was used exclusively at halfback this season.

A crowd of 18,000 overcoated fans watched the nationally-televised game in Cramton Bowl first under bright sunshine, then under a cold, overcast sky.

Although Blume's field goal gave the Rebels the margin of difference, it was Hunt primarily who put the South in scoring range. He completed seven passes out of 20 for 80 yards and picked up another 5 rushing.

Sports writers voted him the outstanding player and singled out center Mike Lucci of Tennessee as the victorious Rebels' defensive standout.

For the losers, Easterly won the acclamation as the best on offense and center Phil Lohmann of Oklahoma on defense.

Cold fingers made the ball hard to hold, and fumbles were frequent. The Yanks lost the ball five times when jarring Rebel tackles knocked it loose and alert Southern defenders pounced on it.

The North completely dominated the first half and bottled up the passing attack the Gray coaches had counted on. But Hunt began to find his range after the intermission and the South started moving.

The Auburn quarterback, a 180-pounder from Lanettt, Ala., started the Rebs on their touchdown drive with a 19-yard pass to end Dave Edwards of Auburn and another to Edwards for 14 yards. Then Hunt drove across on a quarterback sneak from the one.

Fuell couldn't hold the ball on the extra point attempt and the Southerners had to be content with six points which left them one point behind.

A Gray fumble in the first period gave the Yanks the ball on the 42 and started them toward the goal. A fumble momentarily halted the march, but the North got the ball back immediately on a Rebel error, and Sarette scored on a 4-yard run.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — "Without a quarterback, you don't go very good."

Thus spoke coach Ben Schwartzwalder of Syracuse after his Blues were defeated 9-7 Saturday in the Blue-Gray football game. The North had dominated the encounter until Dave Sarettte of Syracuse, its starting quarterback, was put out of the game with a shoulder injury and quarterback Ron Taylor of Missouri was dazed by a head blow in the third quarter.

Ray Graves of Florida, the South coach, was in implied agreement when he said, "The loss of Sarette hurt, I know."

Nevertheless, Graves said, "It's goo dfor the South to win again." It was the first Rebel victory in four years, and left the Grays ahead 14-9 in the 23-year history of the series.

Schwartzwalder admitted that "we got licked," but said he was pleased by the North performance.

Some Yankee players said they thought the field goal which beat them was no good, but their coach declined to make an issue of it.

Butch Blume of Rice kicked the 37-yard field goal after the Yankees had led for three quarters.

The North coach praised emergency quarterback Dick Easterly of Syracuse for keeping a defeat from becoming a rout.

"If Easterly hadn't been there," Schwartzwalder said, "it wouldn't have even looked like a football game."

The 185-pound Easterly played quarterback last year, but had worked as a halfback throughout the current season.

Graves had pats on the back for quarterback Bobby Hunt of Auburn, who completed seven passes out of 20 for 80 yards, and end Dave Edwards, who caught Hunt's passes to set up the South' only touchdown.

The South coach also rejoiced over having Blume kicking for him instead of against him. Blume's field goals meant victory for Rice over Graves' Florida Gators the last two times the teams met.

It was the second Blue-Gray victory for Graves in as many trips to the all-star classic. The South won 16-0 when Graves played for the Gray in 1941.

Rebels Arrive In Dallas For Date With Longhorns

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The Mississippi football squad flew in Saturday to keep its Cotton Bowl date with Texas with coach Johnny Vaught predicting his toughest game yet in a bowl.

Vaught said his team was in good condition and ready for a terrific struggle Monday when the two teams, each with a 9-1 record, collided in the Cotton Bowl.

"I have been trying to figure out how Texas, No. 3, is a three-point underdog to Mississippi, No. 5," grunted Vaught when asked if he thought the odds on the game were correct.

There were 38 players in the Mississippi party that arrived 15 minutes later than it was supposed to — at 10:30 a.m.

Texas was supposed to fly in ahead of Mississippi but was delayed because of equipment trouble on its plane.

Say Tutor Given 10-Year Contract

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Louisiana State football coach Paul Dietzel will sign as Army's head football coach Jan. 4 at West Point, the States-Item said Saturday.

The newspaper said it had learned of the signing date from "a highly authoritative source."

The source also told the newspaper that Dietzel would take four of his LSU assistants with him to West Point to sign 10-year contracts similar to one he'll sign.

LSU, ranked No. 4 nationally in the final Associated Press poll, completes its 1961 grid campaign Jan. 1 in the Orange Bowl against Colorado.

In Miami, where the LSU Tigers are drilling for the bowl game, Dietzel said of an earlier report in The Times-Picayune that he had been offered the Army post:

"It's hard to make comment over some silly assumption. There have been lots of rumors. However, right now I'm not thinking about anything but the Orange Bowl game Monday."

At West Point, a spokesman for the military academy said the athletic board had no comment on the matter beyond saying a statement on the coaching situation would be made in early January.

The States-Item said it learned that Dietzel flew to West Point before the Christmas holidays to consult with Army officials about the coaching job.

Dietzel went to LSU in 1955 after previously serving as an Army line coach under Red Blaik. He is now on his second five-year contract.

But the States-Item said it had reports that Gen. Troy Middleton, retiring LSU president, would request the LSU Board of Supervisors to release Dietzel from his current contract that has three years to run.

The States - Item source said Dietzel would take with him to West four aides: Bill Shalosky, a former assistant coach at Army; George Terry, LSU backfield coach since 1955; and former LSU stars Charlie Pevey and Larry Jones.

Dietzel won coach of the year honors in 1958 when his Tigers earned the national championship. He has been prominently mentioned for the Army post.

The West Point job became vacant after coach Dale Hall was fired at the end of the 1961 season with a year to go on his contract.

The States Item reported its source said if Dietzel does go to West Point, LSU athletic director Jim Corbett would request the LSU board to name Charley McClendon new head coach. McClendon is Dietzel's chief assistant and scout.

Tigers Solid Favorite In Orange Bowl

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Talent-rich Louisiana State is a solid favorite to defeat Colorado Monday in the 28th Orange Bowl football game which has special incentives for both teams.

LSU, Southeastern Conference co-champion with Alabama, will throw three skilled units at the Big Eight kings who plan to play five men at least 50 minutes and substitute by individuals.

Miami folks say they have not seen such determined, hard - hitting preparations for this game in a dozen years.

The showdown between the fourth-ranked Tigers and the seventh-ranked Buffaloes will come at 1 p.m., EST. For the first time the National telecast over ABC will be blacked out for a 150-mile radius.

An original coolness toward Colorado, reflected in a belated invitation extended through the Big Eight tieup, has undergone a major change once the populace saw the size the dedication of the Westerners.

Therein lies the secret of the added Colorado desire. Buff players are aware that the Orange Bowl committee leaned toward Kansas for a time after Colorado had warpped up the league title. They also are conscious they are 13-point underdogs and have heard whispers of "rout."

LSU Coach Paul Dietzel has done everything in his power, to foster the idea Colorado is underrated since the Bayou Bengals arrived. He has repeatedly stated the team's respect for the Buffs.

As a result ticket sales have picked up and sale of about 8,000 more will fill the 73-000-seat Orange Bowl stadium.

The added LSU incentive comes from a burning desire to improve on an unimpressive 2-5-1 bowl record launched on the wrong foot —Sammy Baugh's to be exact— by a 3-2 count in the 1936 Sugar Bowl. One of the Tiger victories marked the only previous visit here when LSU downed Texas A&M 19-14 in 1944.

LSU and Colorado match 9-1 records. The Tigers won nine in a row after an opening loss to Rice, 16-3, built on the forward pass. Six of the seven touchdowns surrendered have come via air where Colorado sharpshooter Gale Weidner will have a clear edge.

Otherwise the rivals have a surprising number of similarities. But television viewers will note one difference. On pet power sweeps, Colorado pulls both guards to run ahead of the hand-off-fed ball carrier while LSU pulls a guard, and the quarterback, after pitching out, helps lead the interference.

Both teams are halfback-heavy. Dietzel calls Wendel Harris, Jerry Stovall, Bd Campbell and Ray Wilkins the four best halfbacks in the country. Colorado's Olympic runner Ted Wood, Leon Mavity, Bill Harris and Ted Somerville are big and swift.

LSU's Earl Gros and Colorado's Loren Schweninger are the unsung stars, claim the opposing camps of their fullbacks.

All-America guard Roy Winston tackle Billy Booth and end Gene Sykes are other players to watch on LSU's White (all-around) team. The defensive specialist "Chinese Bandits" feature linebacker Steve Ward and back Tommy Neck.

'Bama Aware Of Upsets In Sugar Bowl

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Alabama, the National Collegiate football champion, goes into the Sugar Bowl Monday against Arkansas a two touchdown favorite and mindful of what happened to the previous titleholder.

Minnesota, the No. 1 team for 1960, was upset by Washington 17-7 in the Rose Bowl a year ago. Coach Paul Bryant has fired up his unbeaten Alabama team to avoid such ignomy but readily conceded that Arkansas has something big on its side—"that thing called a psychological advantage."

Mild weather and cloudy skies are forecast for the game, an 81,585 sellout. Scalpers are reputed to be getting $80 a pair for good seats. The kickoff is at 1 pm, CST, with NBC televising.

The rival squads wound up their practice in good physical shape except that Tommy Brasher, Arkansas linebacker, is out with injuries.

Alabama takes into the big game a rugged defense anchored on Bill Neighbors, All-America tackle. Only three touchdowns were scored against the Crimson Tide of the Southeastern Conference all season in building a 10-record. Quarterback Pat Trammell, one of the nation's best, leads the attack, with fullback Mike Fracchia a major factor.

Arkansas, from the Southwest Conference, had rougher going in achieving ninth national ranking with an 8-2 record. The two losses were 16-0 to Ole Miss in the season's opener, and 28-3 to Texas. Halfback Lance Alworth sparks the Arkansas attack.

The rival coaches have reputations as rehabilitators of tarnished football reputations. Bryant, since assuming command at his alma mater in 1958, has brought Alabama back to the top, but he still has not won a bowl victory with the Crimson Tide. Penn State beat Alabama 7-0 in the Liberty Bowl in 1960, and Texas tied the Tide 7-7 last year in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

Although Arkansas had only won four championships prior to Coach Frank Broyles taking over, Broyles in four seasons has won the Southwest title twice and tied for it twice.

Broyles has been a little more fortunate in bowl competition. In 1960, Arkansas beat Georgia Tech in the Gator Bowl 14-7, but last year lost to Duke 7-6 in the Cotton Bow.

The teams met no common foes this past season.

Robinson Slowed By Infected Toe

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Royals' 6-5 guard Oscar Robertson could not join his teammates in their trip to Philadelphia Saturday because of an infected toe, a Royals spokesman said.

Robertson made 38 points Friday night in a home game that ended in a 131-116 victory for the Detroit Pistons.

The spokesman said it was not known whether Robertson will be able to play in the Royals' home game against the Syracuse Nationals Monday.

GEORGIA TECH HALFBACK Joe Auer (22) is brought down by Penn State's Charles Sieminski (77) after a short gain in the first quarter of the Gator Bowl game in Jacksonville, Fla., yesterday. Also in on the play are Joe Blasenstein (62) and Al Gursky (43). (AP Wirephoto)

21-8 OVER EAST

Hadl Sparks West To Upset Victory

By JACK STEVENSON

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Kansas quarterback John Hadl threw two touchdown passes and sparked the underdog West to a 21-8 upset over the East Saturday as huge linemen checked All-Americans Ernie Davis and Bob Ferguson in the 37th annual East-West football game.

The 200-pound Hadl, effective as a runner, passer and punter, engineered the opening touchdown drive for the West and his passes of 14 yards to Buddy Iles of Texas Christian and 24 to Curt McClinton of Kansas brought the next two.

	EAST	WEST
First downs	15	15
Rushing yardage	168	122
Passing Yardage	105	142
Passes	11-25	12-20
Passes intercepted by	0	2
Punts	7-36.4	8-39.5
Fumbles lost	1	0
Yards penalized	46	46

A near-capacity crowd of 59,000 in Kezar Stadium and a nationwide television audience saw the high-powered East bottled up in its own territory throughout the first half. The Easteners finally put their offensive in gear early in the third period and moved 80 yards for a touchdown with Roman Gabriel of North Carolina State passing the final 16 to Maryland's Jerry Collins.

After the West drew a penalty on a conversion, Syracuse's Heisman Trophy winner Davis ran the ball over for two points. The East threatened again early in the fourth period, but the threat fizzled after Collins dropped a Gabriel pass in the end zone.

Hadl ran the West out of trouble with a 34-yard dash to the East 24 and three plays later hit McClinton for the final touchdown.

The Kansas quarterback, already signed by the San Diego Chargers of the American Football League, was voted the game's outstanding player. Iles, who has agreed to terms with Dallas of the National Football League, was honored as the top lineman.

The West scored in the first quarter on a 7-yard dash by San Jose State's Mack Burton, who circled end, capping a 55-yard drive. Hadl's pass to Iles covered 14 yards on the first play after the West recovered an East fumble in the second period. Mel Melin of Washington State booted all three conversions.

Utah State's gigantic tackles—All-America Merlin Olsen, at 265 pounds, and Clark Miller at 250—with Ed Blaine, Missouri's 220-pound guard, led the line charge that stopped Davis and Ferguson cold in the first half and checked them most of the second.

The West dominated play in the first half as Hadl guided an offense frequently going for trickier plays than usually are seen in post-season all-star affairs.

Despite the presence of Davis and Ferguson, Ohio State's All-America fullback, the East didn't penetrate past the midfield stripe during the first two periods and had just one first down by intermission.

Hadl handled the plays during the first quarter touchdown drive that took 11 plays, including three key passes by the Kansan. San Jose's Burton, a track man in the spring, circled end from seven yards out but had to dive to reach the end zone.

The second period West tally followed immediately after Notre Dame's Angelo Daberio dropped a Hadl punt at the East 12 with guard Ray Pinion of Texas Christian recovering at the 14. On the next play Hadl found Iles clear in the end zone and threw him a strike.

Neither Gabriel nor Ron Miller of Wisconsin, operating at quarterback for the East, could find the passing range during the opening half. They completed just one of eight tries and that for only one yard. Meanwhile, Hadl was hitting five of seven and Melin three of four to keep the underdogs' offense moving.

The East, switching their attacks into the middle of the line, found better going in the second half, but could score only once in three deep penetrations.

Davis carried the ball 18 times for 88 yards and a 4.6 average while Ferguson gained only 29 yards in nine carries for a 3.3 mark.

Gabriel wound up with 10 completions in 18 attempts for 96 yards, while Miller hit just once in seven tries for 10 yards. Each had one threw intercepted.

Hadl gained 92 yards on seven completions in 11 throws, while Melin hit five of nine for 80.

Hadl Named Outstanding In Shrine Tilt

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — John Hadl of Kansas, quarterback of the winning West team in the 21-8 victory over the East Saturday cleaned up on the honors.

Sportswriters voted Hadl the outstanding player in the 37th Shrine charity game and his teammates awarded him the game football.

"I wish we had 24 footballs," said Head Coach Jim Owens of Washington. "Every guy on our squad would get one."

But neither Owens nor Coach Joe Kuharich of the East disagreed with the selection of Hadl or of West end Buddy Iles of Texas Christian as the game's top lineman.

Owens, whose team was 7½-point underdog, had high praise for his defense, a crew that checked All-Americas Ernie Davis of Syracuse and Bob Ferguson of Ohio State.

"They're good boys," Owens said. "But they didn't do much against us."

Notre Dame's Kuharich said, "three crucial plays cost us the game."

He said the first was the punt that halfback Angelo Daberio of Notre Dame fumbled on the East 12 and Ray Pinion of TCU recovered for the West at the 14.

Seconds later came what Kuharich called mistake No. 2; Hadl's 14-yard touchdown pass to Iles.

"We should have had that covered," Kuharich said.

The third big play was a pass from North Carolina State quarterback Roman Gabriel that Gary Collins of Maryland dropped in the West end zone.

"That pass would have tied the score at 14-all," Kuharich said, "and we would have been in position to go ahead on the conversion."

At the time the West led 14-8.

Kuharich was silent a moment, then added:

"You can't fault anybody. Sometimes you drop 'em, sometimes you catch 'em. Everybody played a fine game."

Yet Ferguson was disgusted.

"We played lousy," said the 230-pound fullback. "No, that wasn't the best line I've faced. I've met better in the Big Ten."

Ferguson suffered a wrist injury which will be X rayed to see if there is a fracture. The big fullback was injured in a collision with the West's 180-pound defensive back, Hank Rivera of Oregon State.

Hall Hurls Penn To 30-15 Victory

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Galen Hall, a balding, bull-shouldered quarterback with defective vision, found his pass targets with the touch of a genius Saturday and hurled Penn State to a 30-15 triumph over favored Georgia Tech in the 17th annual Gator Bowl game.

The stocky, 198-pound Hall threw touchdown passes to halfbacks Al Gursky, Roger Kochman and Hal Powell for 13, 27 and 38 yards, respectively, after Tech had grabbed a 9-0 lead on an unusual safety and a 68-yard, record breaking touchdown run by sophomore halfback Joe Auer.

Hall, who wears spectacles except when he is playing, staged the most spectacular air show in Gator Bowl annals when he completed nine of 19 passes, including eight in a row in guiding Penn State to a 14-0 halftime lead.

	PENN STATE	GA TECH
First downs	13	19
Rushing yardage	127	212
Passing yardage	201	175
Passes	12-24	10-22
Passes intercepted by	2	0
Punts	5-41.6	5-27.6
Fumbles lost	1	3
Yards penalized	63	14

The senior passing wizard did a beautiful job of faking before connecting with Powell for Penn State's winning touchdown in the third quarter. The Nittany Lions took advantage of Tech's tardiness in emerging from its defensive huddle, and Powell was at least 10 yards from the nearest Yellow Jacket defender when he caught the third quarter scoring pass.

Tech's Auer, a brilliant ball carrier in defeat, returned the Southeastern Conference power to contention early in the fourth period when he recovered an errant pitchout from sophomore quarterback Billy Lothridge near the Penn State 28-yard line and raced for his second touchdown in a tremendous individual effort.

Hall hurled his passes from behind an impenetrable barrier thrown up by a huge Penn State line led by ends Bob Tinger and Dave Robinson, tackles Charles Sieminski and Jim Smith. These same huskies, ably aided by centers Jay Huffman and Bill Saul, anchored a furious defense that stopped Tech effectively except for Auer's sparkling forays.

Penn State scored twice more in the closing minutes. Halfback Don Jonas kicked a 23-yard field goal after a desperation Tech pass failed on fourth down. The Lions struck again via a one-foot plunge by fullback Buddy Terris after end Jim Schwab had intercepted a pass and returned it to the Tech 11.

Penn State finished its regular season with a 7-3 record and was sixth in the nation in total offense. The Nittany Lions, three-point underdogs convinced Tech of their attacking power by rolling up the highest point total Coach Bobby Dodd's outfit has yielded since Alabama scored 54 on the Yellow Jackets in 1950.

It was the second straight loss for Tech in the Gator Bowl. Arkansas whipped the Yellow Jackets 14-7 here two years ago after Dodd teams had captured eight bowl victories in succession.

Tech got its safety when the game was less than five minutes old. Hall, trying to pass from the Penn State nine, was rushed into the end zone by Tech tackle Ed Griffin. Hall threw the ball from ruled that he grounded the ball intentionally and awarded Tech two points.

Auer, filling in for injured Ace Chick Graning, astonished the Penn State defense early in the second quarter when he barried over his own right guard, cut sharply to his left and raced 68 yards for the Gator Bowl's longest ground scoring jaunt.

It appeared at this stage that Tech was in complete control. A desperate pass interception by quarterback Pete Liske in the end zone had saved Penn State embarrassment in the first quarter, and Saul recovered a fumbled Tech pitchout at the Penn State seven shortly afterwards. Except for those two incidents, Tech might have been blessed with an early rout.

Robinson, first Negro to play in the Gator Bowl, was Penn State's leading pass receiver with four catches for 49 yards. He also teamed with the fierce Mitinger in showing Tech the best defensive end play the Yellow Jackets have seen in many years.

A record crowd of 50,202 attended.

Penn Coach Doubly Proud Of Boys, Win

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)— "I'm doubly proud of these boys and their victory because Georgia Tech is tough to beat anytime." Penn State football Coach Rip Engle shouted over the turmult of the winning Gator Bowl dressing room Saturday.

While the Nittany Lions whooped it up over their 30-15 victory, Engle said:

"We licked a real, real good team. You don't get too many of those victories against a team like Tech."

The players began dancing for joy on the sidelines minutes before the finish, proud that no team had scored as many points on the losers this season. Actually it was the most points surrendered by Tech in 11 years.

The third touchdown by Penn State in the third quarter after end Dave Robinson forced a fumble and recovered it on the Tech 35 "was a play we've been running all year," Engle said. "Roger Kochman called that one on the field. The pass was launched quickly off a fake block on the end of our receiver. It took advantage of the fact Tech came out of its defensive huddle slowly."

In the losing dressing room, Tech Coach Robby Dodd commented on the same play:

"I don't think we were slow in coming out of the defensive huddle. And it wasn't so much the kind of play they used as the way they executed it. They faked us out of position. It was good execution. They had that throughout the game."

"Another turning point in the game," Engle added, "came when we had a five point lead (20-15) and were apparently going to have to give up the ball. Then Kochman broke up the middle for 14 yards on an inside scissors and we kept the ball for a while longer."

The deciding touchdown came on the first play after Robinson, the only Negro in the contest, broke through to hit quarterback Stan Gann from behind, jar loose the ball and pounce on it.

"Actually the defense didn't call for me to break in like that," Robinson explained with a wide grin. "I should have made contact with the blocker first. But I took a chance. If I'd have missed him I would have been right on the bench.

"I want to say I was real proud to play against a fine Georgia Tech team. They had 11 gentlemen on the field at all times."

Robinson, who missed six games due to injury this season and who grabbed four passes for 49 yards Saturday, accomplished a turnabout of sorts. Pitt Negro Bob Greer was charged with pass interference which set up a 7-0 Sugar Bowl Triumph in 1956.

In the quiet Georgia Tech dressing room, Coach Dodd said Penn State was just a fine football team and "we never did stop them. It was not the kind of plays they used but the way they executed them."

He singled out Galen Hall, Penn State quarterback, as the key man to the Lions' attack and added praise for the running of halfback Roger Kochman.

"Auer, of course, and Williamson ran well for us," Dodd said There was no one turning point in the game, in Dodd's opinion, nor any special key play.

"We were still in the game when it was 20-15, but it was bad when it became 23-15."

The play that gave Penn State that decisive field goal was called from the bench, Dodd said. Tech gambled on a fourth down pass from its 12 with four minutes left to play and it failed.

"The receiver went a little too deep," Dodd said.

He added that it is hard to compare teams, but Penn State had the best offense Georgia Tech faced all year.

Galen Hall Voted Most Valuable In Gator Bowl

JACKSONVILLLE, Fla. (AP) Penn State quarterback Galen Hall, at a loss to explain his passing accuracy despite nearsightedness, was voted the most valuable player Saturday in the Gator Bowl football game.

"Hall was the key to their ball club," Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Dodd said after Hall led State to a 30-15 triumph.

The balding Hall, who wears glasses off the field, does not have any visual aid when playing. He said afterward in the dressing room when asked what his visual problem is, "I just can't see very far."

Hall threw three touchdown passes, completing 12 of 22 aerials for 175 yards. In the first three scoring drives he missed only one of 11 throws.

Georgia Tech's most valuable player was halfback Joe Auer who was playing first string only because regular Chick Graning was out with an injury. Auer turned in a Gator Bowl record touchdown jaunt of 68 yards, then later scooped up a fumble and scored on a great individual effort from the 14.

Tigers Batter Crusaders In 73-57 Stomp

By RICK BRYAN
World Sports Editor

East Texas Baptist's surprising gang of bandits ball-hawked their way to a 73-57 win over William Carey to capture the eighth annual Northeast State Christmas tourney here last night.

Paced by the ball-snatching and general defensive work of Dale McIntosh, a 6-1 junior from Fort Smith, Arkansas, the Tigers grabbed an early lead and, except for one very brief interval, held it all the way.

McIntosh, who was chosen most valuable player of the tournament, exemplified the heads-up play of East Texas throughout the tourney.

He stole the ball repeatedly, last night, baffling the Crusaders with his speed, sense of timing, and handled the ball impeccably. He was also top Tiger rebounder and one of the high shooters.

The Bengals nipped Delta State 65-63 in the opening round of play Friday night, with a tremendous second half surge. They showed the same spirit last night.

East Texas jumped off to a quick first half lead and held margins as high as six points before William Carey closed the gap and tied the score 35-35 just before the half.

The Crusaders took their only lead early in the second half going ahead 37-35 with 19:14 to play. They increased the margin to 47-44 at 11:44 before the Tigers caught up and went ahead to stay.

From there on it was all East Texas with the gap widening until the Tigers got their biggest margin of 16 points in the final score.

William Carey had shooting trouble at the beginning and never really got going well except the one time when the club was ahead.

For East Texas it was a great defensive effort and an all-round spirited performance. In adddition to the pilfiring success, the Tigers blocked Crusader shots well and displayed good ball control. For a team that was soundly trounced by Northeast in this same Brown Hall gym earlier this year, East Texas looked vastly improved.

Jerry Morgan led the atttack with 17 points, followed by William Dunn with 14 and Henry Duke and McIntosh with 13 apiece.

McIntosh wasn't satisfied with his other exploits, he had to lead East Texas in rebounding too, grabbing 11.

Joe Belan, a 6-6, 215 pounder, paced the Crusaders on the boards, grabbing 12. Vickers copped 10.

Vickers and Stephenson of William Carey, Dunn of East Texas and Northeast's Lanny Johnson and Stewart Toms rounded out the six-man all-tournament contigent.

Northeast, the host team, blasted Delta State 80-51, for consolation honors in the opening game last night.

Morgan's field goal put East Texas out front 2-0 at 19:44. Duke pushed it to 4-0 second later and the Tigers were off and running.

Dunn sank two with 4:53 left in the opening half for East Texas' six point lead at 29-23.

At this point Vickers went wild, hitting on two beautiful hook shots, then adding a lay-up to make it 31-29 at 3:61.

Leroy Wescovich followed up with a field and it made it 32-31 with 1:55 remaining.

Duke sank two for the Tigers and Jackie Putman hit a foul shot to make it 35-31 with :16 left, but Vickers calmly sank two charity tosses and then Wescovich stole the ball and drove up for the tying layup at 35-35 just as the buzzer sounded.

The Crusaders came back strong after intermission, going ahead 37-35 on Stephenson's long shot from the side.

East Texas tied the score twice, then took the lead 41-39 on McIntosh's two-pointer and increased it to 43-39 on another field goal by the Fort Smith guard.

William Carey caught up to 46-46 with 10:00 remaining on a two-pointer by Bob Kouns, but McIntosh stole the ball and passed to Morgan to shove the Tigers back into a four point lead.

That was the beginning of the end.

The Crusaders never got close again.

With 6:19 to play the Baptist were out front by 10 points, 59-49.

Morgan shoved it to 15 points, 70-55, with 1:15 left and Leon Prince's crip shot made the score 73-57 with 0:35 remaining.

Sicily Island Wins Newellton Tourney Crown

NEWELLTON (Special) — Albert Krause pumped in 15 points in the fourth quarter to lead the Sicily Island quintet to an exciting 56-52 victory over Calhoun in the finals of the Newellton Christmas Holiday basketball tourney.

Calhoun held a 17-point advantage at the end of the third period, but Sicily Island got hot and poured in 30 points to take the victory.

In the consolation game Baskin beat Winnsboro 68-54. Archie Evans netted 17 points for Baskin while James McLemore and Fablon Giesman led Winnsboro with 16 apiece.

Krause poured in 30 points in the semi-finals to lead Sicily Island to a 66-51 victory over Baskin. Evans scored 20 for the losers.

In the other semi-final contest Calhoun mauled Winnsboro 67-28. Bobby Brownlee led Calhoun with 15 and Giesman was high for Winnsboro with 11.

Indians Cop Consolation By Defeating Delta, 80-51

By KEITH PRINCE
World Sports Writer

A hustling band of Northeast State Indians proved how sweet revenge can be last night by completely demoralizing Delta State, 80-51, to capture the consolation championship of the eighth annual Northeast Christmas cage tournament.

The big win, which gave Coach Lenny Fant's Tribe a 5-4 season mark, not only got them the consolation title but it also help make up for the close 70-67 loss handed them by the Statesmen earlier in the season.

The victory was a complete team effort from Staurt Toms' jump shot at 13:58 in the first half, which gave Northeast a lead it never relinquished, all the way down to Jerry Salley's beautiful corner shot with 26 seconds left in the game that gave the Tribe its 80th point.

Although the dependable Lanny Johnson upped his four year total point output to 1,024 on his 22 tallies last night, and big Robert Cook fought his way to 14 rebounds, there could still be no definite star for the Indians. And the reason is simple — Every Northeast cager who saw action hustled like he was playing for the national championship, and the end result is evident by merely looking at the score, 80-51.

Northeast, after hitting only 26 percent of its shots against William Carey in the opener, canned 33 of 78 shots last night for a respectable 42.3 percentage. On the other hand the vistors could manage only 19 fielders out of 70 tries for a poor 27.1 percentage.

In the rebounding department, which alone can often spell victory or defeat, the Tribe came out on top with 14 to spare. With Cook leading the way, the Indians grabbed off 59 while Delta State was pulling down 45.

The Statesmen started off quickly and led 4-0 following successive shots by John Long and Larry Dowdy. Seconds later, Bob Groves broke the ice for Northeast with a jumper, but the Tribe fell behind by four again, 6-2, when Long hit again from outside with 2:30 seconds gone.

With 3:06 gone, Johnson was fouled while shooting and popped in both tries to narrow the gap to 6-4.

Dowdy sandwiched two free tosses around Groves' jumper and gave the Statesmen an 8-6 lead, but Jimmy Walker came through for the Tribe with an outside jump shot to knot the score at 8-8.

Then when Toms popped in his tie breaking shot, the Indians went on the warpath and didn't slow down until the final seconds ticked away.

Cook upped the lead to 13-8 with two gratis tosses. Dowdy hit again for the visitors, but Johnson hit on a set shot and the Indians led by four again.

Jack Case canned a free throw with 12:03 left in the half, but Northeast then went on a scoring spurt that netted 10 straight points while the Statesmen were going scoreless.

During the "scoring spree," Walker popped in four points, and Cook, Groves, and Johnson all chipped in with a fielder.

For the rest of the half it was mostly Johnson, as the senior guard once again proved why he was an All-GSC selection last year.

BIG ROBERT COOK, Northeast's junior pivot, connects with a hook shot in the first half of last night's action against Delta State. The Indians won the consolation championship of the annual Northeast Christmas tourney by trouncing the Statesmen, 80-51. Cook was the leading rebounder in the contest, grabbing off 14. Guarding Cook is Larry Dowdy, as John Long (23) and Charles Preston look on. (Staff Photo by Ben L. Bradford)

The Ouachita High product popped in eight points in a short two minute spend, and each shot was of the "gosh, how did he do that" variety.

At 7:16, he flipped in a driving layup that put the Indians in front, 28-15.

Only seconds later, at 6:04, he started to drive, stopped on a dime, and popped in a one hand jumper.

Then followed with another jump shot with 4:49 left.

And to cap off the short "Johnson show," the Indian ace scored on a finely executed fast break in which he gave that little bit of extra effort to out maneuver the three men that were guarding him.

By the end of the first half Northeast led 45-25, and the second half was much the same.

With about 10:00 minutes left in the contest, Coach Fant put in a fresh bunch of Indians and they continued the assault.

Salley quickly got into the scoring column with a driving two-pointer. And the Tribe led 63-35.

Jerry Snelling then added a free toss to the cause at 10:17.

BIGGEST JACKPOT IN HISTORY

Packers Picked To Win NFL Title Over Giants

By NORMAN MILLER

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI)—The go-for-broke New York Giants take on the close-to-the-vest Green Bay Packers Sunday for the biggest jackpot in National Football League history.

Coach Vince Lombardi's methodical, ground-gaining Packers were 3½ point favorites to beat the gambling, pass-minded Giants in one of the coldest title games ever played. There was a slight possibility the game might be played in light snow flurries.

While pro football's two most powerful teams fight it out in 20 degree temperatures at Green Bay City Stadium, an estimated 40,000,000 (m) will view the game on television in the confort of living rooms and cocktail lounges.

The game will be televised coast-to-coast and in parts of Canada by the National Broadcasting Company.

The TV rights were sold by the NFL for $615,000, largest price ever paid for a single sports event.

A crowd of 41,000 hardy fans, most of them from this football loving community in the North Country, will sit in on the first championship game ever played in Green Bay in the 42-year-history of the NFL.

Million Dollar Gate

The payoff game will reward each winning player with about $5,300 and each loser with about $3,100. The shares from the NFL's first million dollar gate are smaller than might be expected because $300,000 has been consigned to the NFL players benefit fund.

The weather forecast of rising temperatures and a prospect of a dry field with solid footing raised the Packer chances for their first league championship since 1944.

If snow did come it was not expected to be heavy enough to affect the field that has been protected by a tarpaulin and one foot of hay for the past five weeks. When a corner of the field was uncovered Friday, the turf was found to be dry and soft.

Centenary Takes GS Classic Title

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Centenary College showed a torrid first half attack Saturday night and then fought off a determined South Carolina comeback in the final half to take an 86-79 victory for the championship of the Gulf South Classic.

Centenary jumped out front 46-35 by intermission and increased its margin to 16 points early in the second half. Then the Gents hit a cold spell while South Carolina's defending champion Gamecocks found the range and went ahead 71-70.

The two teams swapped the lead before host Centenary pulled in front with two quick field goals and then slowed the game down in the remaining minutes.

Joining Whisnant on the all-tournament team, were Scotti Ward of South Carolina, Jimmy Williams of Centenary, Bob Neumann of Memphis State, Jimmy Jennings of Murray (Ky.) State and Byran Jensen of Hamline.

Northwestern (La.) State won seventh place as Gene Wright popped in a two-hand set shot in the final two seconds for a 65-63 victory over Louisiana Tech.

Maroons Grab Sugar Crown; Stop Bengals

By ED TUNSTALL

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Mississippi State's scatttergun attack ripped through Louisiana State in the second half Saturday ngiht and the unbeaten Maroons won the Sugar Bowl basketball title with a 73-15 decision over the Bayou Tigers.

The Maroons held a slim 29-25 margin at halftime, but with Leland Mitchell and Doug Hutton leading the second half barrage, Louisville trimmed Maryland 83-64 in consolation competition.

On Dit'

by Denise

This weekend's burst of activity marks the end of holiday gaiety and the beginning of several weeks of quiet while everyone returns to regular schedules, duties, and diets. But it has been busy hereabouts, what with parties of all sizes for all ages at almost any hour.

Eight college freshmen, new Kappa Delta pledges at five different schools, were guests of honor at a coffee party hosted by local alumnae of the sorority Wednesday. The affair was given in the home of MARIE COOKston on Pargoud Boulevard between ten - thirty and eleven-thirty in the morning.

Arriving guests were greeted at the door by JANET MORGAN, party chairman, and presented to LINDA DANSBY, alumnae president, who stood with the honorees in the living room. Red and white camellias were used in brass scales in the entrance hall and in a pyramid arrangement in the living room. A silver epergne filled with white ice roses centered the dining room table.

Out of town Kappa Deltas who attended the party included JUDY DODDS and LIBBY SUMRALL of Ruston; KAY WORTHINGTON of Baton Rouge; and PENNY SIMS and ELIZABETH BARHAM of Bastrop.

Visitors in town are always good reason for party - giving, and never more so than during the holiday season. Here this week as guests of the ARTHUR SMITHS were ADRIENNE ZANDER of New Orleans, and her two children, MARILYN and FREDDY. The guests and their hosts left on Friday and made overnight stops in Lafayette and Placquemine en route to New Orleans for several days . . . During her stay, Adrienne was honored at a number of informal parties. On Tuesday, BOBBY GOLDSMITH was hostess for luncheon at Bayou DeSiard Country Club, and on Wednesday ANN KEMP invited a group for luncheon at the Paragon. On Thursday afternoon, about a dozen ladies gathered at the home of VIRGINIA WARNER for a visit over the coffee cups.

No better time than Christmas Eve for a family dinner party, such as that planned by ANNA GRAY and JAMES A. NOE last sunday at Bayou DeSiard Country Club. Guests included friends whose far-scattered children were home for Christmas. "Grown-ups" were seated in the main dining room, while the "younger generations" gathered in the private dining room.

Those present included the D. X. ELETTS with their son JOHN, here from Fort Worth, Texas, daughter JO MARIE, and houseguest WANDA HERRIN, also of Fort Worth; the S. E. HUEY family, with Frances' mother, INDIA STUBBS, and sons STAN, home from Seattle, and MARKLEY, on leave from the U. S. Navy; the GEORGE SNELLINGS, JR., with daughter NANCY, home from Newcomb, son, Frank, AINSLIE and GEORGE SNELLINGS, III, and their son WILCOX, from Baton Rouge; and their houseguest, LEON IRVIN of New Orleans.

Outstanding event on the holiday calendar for the junior high set was a dance given Thursday night at Bayou DeSiard Country Club, hosted by KAKI and JEFF STONE, CHUCK and DOUG TIDWELL, and SUSAN STONE. For the party, Kaki was wearing a bell - skirted dancing dress of white silk printed with long stemmed American Beauty roses. Susan's dress a luscious shade of pale blue, was styled with wide white collar and bouffant skirt.

Two punch tables were set up on the glassed porch of the club, each centered with candle trees wreathed with holly and red ribbon. Punch and cookies were served. In the main ballroom, which was decorated in holiday motif, Les and Wendy played for dancing from seven - thirty until ten.

Things were tres gai at the RABUN SMITH residence on Milton street last Thursday evening when two of their sons entertained at parties back-to-back. TOMMY invited a dozen seventh graders between six and eight; RAY's guests, a dozen Neville freshmen, were there from eight until ten. A rafia wreath trimmed with brown ribbon and gold balls decorated the front door, and candle holders spelling "NOEL" were used in the entrance hall. Angels stood in a wreath of gilded greenery and angel hair on the living room mantel, while the Christmas tree was in the bay window. Refreshments of punch, sliced turkey for sandwiches, chili con queso dip, and cupcakes were served in the dining room. Both groups danced to the stereo in the family room.

NELL SMITH invited a group of seventh grade girls for informal luncheon at the home of her grandmother, CRARY SMITH, on Pargoud boulevard. The guests were seated at a table centered with a seasonal arrangement of greenery. Hamburgers, bottled drinks, and miniature fruit cakes were served. After lunch, the group went to the movies.

Just before Christmas, BETSY HUDGENS invited a dozen little girl friends for a party at home on Country Club Road. Betsy's brothers, LEE and PAUL, presented a marionette show telling the Christmas story for the guests. Games were played before refreshments were served from a table centered with an antique punch bowl and laden with gaily decorated christmas cookies.

A tradition on Emerson street is the party given two days before christmas by the children of the THOMAS HENRYs. The little hosts and hostes are REGGIE, MELTON, TYLER, ELAINE, and JAMES. Twenty - three children in the neighborhood attended this year's celebration.

Guests brought gifts, which were exchanged by number from the gift table decorated with glittered pink butterflies and pink balls. Lamp post candles were given as favors. The dining room table was covered with a red cloth and centered with a silver candlestick holding twisted red candles tied with holly. On the menu were hamburgers, potato chips, soft drinks, and Christmas cookies.

If you strike a thorn or rose,
Keep a-goin!

If it hails or if it snows,
Keep a-goin!
'Taint no use to sit an whine
When the fish ain't on your line;
Bait you hook and keep a-tryin'—
Keep a-goin'!
When the weather kills your crop,
Keep a-goin'.
Though 'tis work to reach the top,
Keep a-goin'!
S'pose you're out o' evry dime,
Gittin' broke ain't any crime;
Tell the world you're feelin' prime
Keep a-goin'!
When it looks like all is up,
Keep a-goin'!
Drain the sweetness from the cup,
Keep a-goin'!
See the wild birds on the wing,
Hear the bells that sweetly ring,
When you feel like sighin', sing—
Keep a-goin'!

Keep Lips Moist To Avoid Chafing

Lips are always in danger of becoming dry or chapped, and during cold weather are even more susceptible to these conditions. To avoid a rough, chafed look and also to relieve the discomfort of chapped lips, here are tips by a beauty authority.

In the morning before applying lipstick and also before retiring, apply a night cream or moisturizer to the lips and massage gently but thoroughly with a damp-dry silk sponge. In addition to keeping the lips soft and dry this will also remove any unsightly flakes or particles of skin that may have hardened or cracked. The silk sponge will allow you to massage the lips without irritating the delicate skin.

Low Slung Look Dominates In Resort Wear

A-lines and low flares dominate in resort and cruise wear for the coming season. Also important in skirts are pleated styles effecting a cone shape. Overblouses are favored everywhere, over pants, over skirts, with little town suits. Here again a bit more fit is indicated.

These are general trends in resort sportswear, as summarized by the fashion editors of Women's Wear Daily after viewing manufacturers' collections. They find that jackets are shaped closer to the body but definitely not plastered. Bustline darts and gently rising belts suggest a lifted waistline. Demi-fitted cropped jackets are also in the picture.

Stretch fabrics are no longer confined to pants. They now appear in active playwear, even casual dresses. Stretch denim is a most important entry this season, in bright colors as well as the familiar navy and faded blue, styled with a real western look and used for hip-slung pants.

STEAK SLICE

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Ever wonder why you pay $1 a pound of steak when cattle on the hoof or on the hook is selling for 25 cents a pound?

The U.S. Department of Agriculture explains it this way: less than four per cent of a steer is sirloin steak, so scarcity increases cost. Also, the price the housewife pays for a steak includes a lot of other things besides the price of the animal— frieght, labor and packaging.

THE DISTORTED PICTURE

Most of us have a distorted picture of our children's physical fitness. We know that today's youngsters are taller and heavier than yesterday's. But what about their strength, endurance, flexibility and stamina?

The fact is that our youngsters' physical fitness has slipped—slipped alarmingly. Now's the time to call a halt to the sedentary way of life that's sapping their vitality.

What can you do about it? At your next PTA meeting, you can urge your child's school to adopt a vigorous program for physical development.

Such a program of vigorous, daily exercise has been put into effect in many schools—providing youngsters the opportunity to develop their bodies—and to keep them fit.

Find out whether your child's school has an adequate program. And, if not, why not?

Hospital Helpers

'Candy Stripers'

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff Writer

"One elderly man was really happy to see us come into his hospital room — just someone to come in and smile at him."

Frances Byrd, 16-years-old and a "Candy Striper" was speaking. Along with 31 other high school girls from Neville and West Monroe, Frances goes to class five days a week, then takes part of her Saturday to work as a St. Francis hospital volunteer.

They wear peppermint-stick uniforms which they purchase for themselves . . . and do everything a volunteer can, from bringing a patient a coke to carrying in a bedpan.

COMFORT CART

"On the floor we get anything the patient wants — go get them a soft drink, run down to the gift shop and get a magazine . . . sometimes we put them on bedpans and stuff like that," said Frances.

"We really like our work, we haven't had anyone quit."

The group has grown from five girls to its present membership, and would like to include teenagers from all high schools in this parish.

Frances, who is chairman, Kathleen Cockran, the secretary, Diane Alexander, Jeanne Rowan and Pat Porter formed the nucleus of the organization. Mrs. Helen Lewis, former American Airlines hostess, spearheaded the formation.

First job for the girls was to substitute for St. Francis Guild volunteers during the summer. Now they supplement that group.

An innovation in the Monroe area, the Candy Stripers already are established groups in Shreveport and in the Northeast part of the United States.

"They work on different floors and help out in many ways," commented Mrs. Lewis, a guild member. "Their duties? Filling water pitchers, running errands for nurses, helping in the business office, making favors for trays for holidays.

"The girls are very much needed in the hospital, and they enjoy their work — they feel they're doing something for someone. It's good for any person to feel they are needed or wanted."

How do the nurses react?

COOPERATE

"Usually if we cooperate with them, they will cooperate with us," said a practical teenager. "It took a little time for them to get used to us.

"The nuns? They've really tried to help us and get us started. They've been a big help. Sister Edith has been especially helpful and Sister Martha and Mother Finbarr."

Mother Finbarr, the superior at the hospital, thinks the Candy Stripers are "very helpful." We're glad to have them around here — we wish we had more.

"Maybe some youngsters from other schools could come in and help us," she commented. "We'd love to have them."

Sixteen-year-old Kathleen Cockran "likes to help on the floors best of all.

"I work on the fifth floor, help Sister Edith, run errands, run things down to the laboratory, take trays around, bring water and ice to the rooms. Once I helped a nurse change a bed. We just help with the little things."

ACCEPTED

Membership includes Frances Byrd, chairman, Mary Lee Milstead, co-chairman, Sharron Monroe, co-chairman, Kathleen Cockran, secretary.

Diane Alexander, Jeanne Rowan, Sherry Branch, Shirley Dean, Gayle Dunn, Sally Farr, Suzanne Fisher, Diane Gray, Laura Griffith, Lynn Haddad, Julie Larsen.

By J. W. DAVIS

WASHINGTON (AP)—A century later we can still see and read how it was in America's Civil War, how people felt, what they did—the small things.

Abraham Lincoln thought "Dixie," the stirring march tune of the Southern fighting men, was a fine song. The brass of the Confederacy never warmed to it, never completely accepted it.

Some crooked war contractors made an early killing by providing Union soldiers with shoddy uniforms that wore out in two weeks. The soldiers had to pay for them out of a $42-a-year clothing allowance.

Down South, as the war pressed hard on the home front, a Richmond cookbook told how to make "a splendid cup of coffee" without coffee. You roasted acorns with a little bacon fat, and went on from there.

Such bits of information, spotted here and there among relics of great and moving events, have helped put across what poet-historian Carl Sandburg terms "the best exhibit I've seen" on the Civil War.

The show is the Library of Congress' display "The American Civil War . . a Centennial Exhibit." Its big entries are dramatic and historic documents, letters, diaries, maps, pictures, sketches and songs.

Sandburg helped open the exhibit to a standing room only audience Oct. 25 and the crowds have been coming ever since. It will run to the spring of 1965.

A viewer, whether he's a meticulous Civil War student or just a casual Washington tourist, can put in an interesting hour or more at the glassed-in cases standing row on row in the library's Great Hall.

Near the beginning of the tour is Lincoln's self-edited first inaugural address. There also, in his own handwriting, is Lincoln's April 15, 1861 call for 75,000 state militia troops to put down "combinations too powerful to be suppressed by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings, or by powers vested in the marshals by law."

LEE'S LETTER

Close by is the actual letter Lee wrote April 20, 1861 to a kinsman explaining why he felt he had to resign his commission in the U.S. Army.

"I have been unable to make up my mind to raise my hand against my native state, my relations, my children & my home," Lee wrote.

By such still-living words of Lincoln and Lee is brought home the great agony of the America of 1861-1865.

Exhibit No. 239, the lest in the catalog, contains Lincoln's second inaugural address, of March 4, 1865, in his own handwriting and in printed form. For a fitting close, the arrangers of the exhibit chose his famous words.

"With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, for his widow and orphan—to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace, among ourselves and with all nations."

The exhibit was in the making the better part of a year, by Lloyd A. Dunlap, library consultant in Civil War studies, and Arthur G. Burton, exhibits specialist, under the general direction of Herbert J. Sanborn, exhibits officer of the library.

The exhibit begins with seeds of the conflict. It runs through the formation of the armies, the soldier's life, the war on land and sea, lithographic views, care of the sick and wounded, reporting the war, politics and government, the home front, the songs of the war and the steps that looked toward peace.

The handwritten diary of Edmund Ruffin, fire-eating secessionist from Virginia, tells of being invited to fire the first, or one of the first, shots at Ft. Sumter at the start of the war.

The first conscription act in American history, it is brought out, was the one the Confederate Congress passed in 1862. The federal Congress followed suit in 1863.

SUBSTITUTES

So many men were able to dodge service by hiring substitutes, that from both sides rose the protest that this was "a rich man's war and a poor man's fight."

Complaints against army food were, as in every war, regular and plentiful. Union soldiers complained they couldn't stomach what was available; Confederates complained that too often nothing was available.

A favorite Confederate concoction was "cush." It was a mixture of bacon grease, cold beef, water and crumbled corn bread, stirred together in a skillet.

Courts-martial were frequent. One order on display in the exhibit deals with three Confederate deserters. Each of the three was sentenced: "to receive fifty lashes well laid on his bare back with a rawhide; to have branded on his left hip the letter 'D'; to have his head shaved, and to be drummed out of the service."

Fierce enemies as a rule, Johnny Reb and Billy Yank fraternized at times between battles. The diary of Lyman D. Holford of the 6th Wisconsin Regiment records one incident in a neatly penciled script.

"This morning (July 1, 1863) at 7 o'clock as I was on post one of the Rebs saluted me with Halloa Yank! and notwithstanding orders to the contrary I answered with Halloa, Reb! and from that we got into conversation which ended in his sending three Richmond papers across the river on a board with a small sail attached, and some of our boys sent some papers back on the same craft—the day was fine as we could wish and taking everything into consideration we have had a good time so far."

Beachboys Live With Surf

EDITOR'S NOTE — The beachboys of Waikiki spend their lives rolling with the surf, making lonely tourists feel at home on land and sea and basking in the sun in between. It sounds idyllic but the beachboys indignantly insist their life isn't all fish and poi. Just most of it.

By JACK SCHREIBMAN

HONOLULU (AP) — As the Hawaiian sun made a million mirrors of the gentle leeward Oahu surf, a group of outrigger canoes pushed off from Waikiki Beach. They were filled with beachboys, normally a fun-loving lot.

This time there were no smiles or pidgin shouts. The beachboy familiar to the tourist has another side.

This group was taking the ashes of little Sandy—a poi dog, or mongrel—on his last trip to the surf. A mile out from the beach, where the first combers began to form for their long glide into the shore, the ashes were scattered.

There they mingled with the ashes of other Waikiki beachboys who loved the beach and surf so much they couldn't bear to leave them, even in death.

The Waikiki beachboy has become something of a legend throughout the world. His airy good humor and fractured pidgin-English endear him to the malihini newcomer and very often bring him far-flung friendships that last for years.

There are about 70 beachboys along Waikiki's sandy mile. They serve the beach hotels and form a club.

They also have some of the most unusual nicknames . . . Yo-Yo . . . Two bits . . . Brown Crab . . . Mud . . . Steamboat . . . Turkey . . . July, just to name a few. No one seems to know where the names come from.

July knows, however. "I was born in July so that's what they call me," he said.

The skills of sand and surf are like breathing to the beachboy.

In a few minutes he can grab a palm frond, strip it in half and weave it into a coconut hat of virtually any shape. And like as not he'll sell it to an admiring tourist for a dollar or two.

He hands out towels, sets up back rests and can poke a beach umbrella into the sand so as to defy the freshest tradewind. He can demonstrate an embarrassingly simple method of stripping the thick, fibrous husk from a coconut.

In the surf he's one with the fish. He can paddle - steer a 650-pound fiberglass canoe loaded with 10 people through a thick school of surfers as if the boat were on a track.

If he feels like it he can get a surfboard and paddle out with windmilling arms to the nearest combers, and come racing back shrieking the Hawaiian version of a rebel yell.

GINGER ROGERS

'Resist Twist,' Advice Of Star

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Resist the twist, urges Ginger Rogers, who hopes the dance mania will ring out with the old year.

Such a prospect is not likely, but at least Ginger can raise her voice in dissent. And who is better qualified? Wasn't she the pretty half of the most successful dance team of all time? Yes, she was.

She puts her protest pretty strongly: "The twist is ungraceful, vulgar and exhibitionism personified. I think it's terrible."

MINORITY

There are those who agree with her, but they are in the minority. The rest of the nation has gone twist-nutty. Three feature films on the craze are flooding the theaters. The ailing night club industry has taken a twist for the better and is staging a comeback with the new dance.

"I think it's a scandal," Ginger reiterates. "It is the most obscene dance I've ever seen, worse than the shimmy ever was. If people realized how bad they looked while doing the twist, they would not do it."

Ginger said she was introduced to the twist on the golf course, of all places. She met a friend who said her 20-year-old son had been out until 6 a.m. doing the dance, which employs maximum movement of the hips and minimum of the feet.

"She demonstrated it for me and I was astonished!" Ginger said. "I was embarrassed for all of us — my husband (William Marshall), a girl friend and the three young caddies. And for the woman, too, because she didn't realize how obscene she looked."

She is often asked about a reunion with her famed partner Fred Astaire.

"I'd like nothing better," she said. "My husband was talking about it recently and said he was going to discuss it with Fred.

"But then I read an item that Fred Astaire would not discuss three things in interviews: His age, Ginger Rogers, Barrie Chase. So I told my husband that maybe it wasn't such a good idea."

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

'Birds' Motif Seen In Flower Display

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Mrs. Paul Bourg, Louisiana Fifth District Flower Show judge from Hodge, presented the TV and Fifth District Garden Center show last week. This proved to be a most interesting and informative show since Mrs. Bourg took "Birds" as her theme.

She gave tips on how to make feeders and care for the birds this time of year. Also, she showed arrangements that she had made featuring birds, and, New Year's decorating ideas.

The first arrangement shown for the New Year was made entirely of gourds. Four different kinds of gourds were sprayed with flat white paint. Mrs. Bourg explained that she used the gesso (plaster of Paris mixed with a building material) as a white paint for her gourds. Two coats were used.

GLASS BEADS

While the second coat was still wet she sprinkled on glass beads — the type that's used in highway sign making. The gourds had been dried by hanging them in a warm, dry place without piercing them. Two very long, slender, curving gourds were used to form the line of this arrangement.

They were placed on a large block of styrafoam. The smaller gourds were used as filler. One very large round gourd served as the focal point. The sparkling white of this arrangement was symbolic of the New Year.

A conversational piece of idea was brougth out by placing one heaping tablespoon of soda and one heaping tablespoon of citric acid into a large brandy snifter or fish bowl. Mrs. Bourg slowly poured water into the snifter. Next she tossed in 1½ cups of moth balls. This caused a chemical reaction making the solution bubble. Any kind of flower is pretty floating on top. Mrs. Bourg placed a pink Camellia on top of hers. To renew this action simply add more of the ingredients at intevals. This would be lovely to give a shut - in or an elderly person who is confined to her room. As I said, it would make a striking conversational piece for the den coffee table.

BIRD FEED

Mrs. Bourg explained that from now until Spring the birds will find it difficult to get food. We can help them out by placing feeders in our yards. She showed one that even a child can make. It was made of two pie tins and a large fruit can. These were painted a soft green. A hole was pierced in the center of each through which a straightened -out coat hanger was threaded. The lower end of the hanger was bent to hang over a tree limb or post in the yard. Another feeder for the meat - eating birds is the suet pine cone. Mrs. Bourg showed one that she had made by spooning out the cooled melted tallow (to which she had added millet seed) into a well opened pine cone. It is then ready to hang in the yard. The result is most interesting. You'll find yourself watching for your new little boarders.

Two free form, interpretive cone arrangements were shown featuring birds. Mrs. Bourg had made these for her show. The first one was made by placing the Bamboo shoots for her line in a low ceramic bowl filled with water and sand. The focal point of the design was two lovely flamingo birds. For added color and depth she placed several pieces of (cullets) green glass around the base of the bamboo. Into the water she floated two or three narcissis blossoms and strawberry begonia leaves. These resembled the water lilies in this lovely miniature tropical scene.

FIGURINE

The figurine of St. Francis centered the other scene created by Mrs. Bourg. He was placed on a lovely irregular shaped log round base. For a background, a tan Cypress knee was used in a vertical position. Dried pyracanthia berries were placed in a zig-zag design against the cypress and on down into the right side of the base of the design. A colorful assortment of petrified rocks was placed around the feet of St. Francis. Three small ceramic birds perched on the rocks near the feet of the figurine. This would give long - lasting pleasure to any bird lover.

For another arrangement Mrs. Bourg placed spiral dried eucalyptus in a tall tan compote container. Styrafoam was used as a holder. The eucalyptus formed a Hogarth line. The focal area of this design contained a lovely imported ceramic bird. A matching bird was placed within the line, yet separate as an accessory at the base of the container. Three pink camellias were placed within the line as a filler and added color. These were placed in water picks to keep them fresh.

PERMANENT

A permanent arrangement made of a tall branch of colorful loquat leaves with the blossom placed in a tall glass bottle for a container. A cluster of dried love apples was hung from the lip of the bottle, and a cluster of soft green leaves tied to the container. For focal interest, Mrs. Bourg placed one life - sized ceramic brown thrush on the top of the clustered love apples as though he had just perched to eat some of the fruit. It is lovely for the den fireplace hearth.

To conclude her program Mrs. Bourg showed a very atttractive bird cage planter. She had placed artificial greenery in the three small pots within the wire cage. To this she added two very life-like canaries, one near the top and the other at the base of the cage. You could almost hear them sing as you looked at the colorful design. This would certainly cheer any room this time of year, and, also, remind us to feed our little friends outside so that we can keep them singing over America throughout the coming year. How about this for a New Year's Resolution— ?

Note — By the way, if you should happen to see a small purple colored bird in your vicinity that you cannot identify, it will probably be one of the white - crowned sparrows sent out from California recently. They were dyed purple. It would be appreciated very much if you would notify the Louisiana Ornithological Society in care of LSU, Baton Rouge, La., if you should see one of these birds.

JOHN WAYNE slugs it out from New Orleans to the great Southwest in the CinemaScope-Color adventure, "The Comancheros", now showing at the Paramount Theatre.

'Gideon' Likely Olivier Play At New House

Sir Laurence, managing director of the playhouse, plans to enact the role created by Fredric March in the Broadway version of the Paddy Chayefsky hit drama.

WORK LOOMS AHEAD

NEW YORK (AP)—Composer Jule Styne has plenty of work ahead.

When the Brice project is completed — probably for production next season—the composer goes to work on a tune version of "The Sleeping Prince."

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Replace Old Shrub Conifer

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

This is the time to get rid of those ratty looking old coniferous evergreens from foundaton plantings and gardens and replace them with young ones.

After conifers have been starved or neglected, it is almost impossible to revive them. They cannot be trimmed back beyond the living needles because most kinds will not come out that far back. Even if they did send out new growth, it would not cover the bare twigs, and sun scald would burn the branches before new growth could shade it.

DOWNFALL

Starvation and failure to shape the shrub conifers are the two things that usually have led to their destruction. Many of them were planted around buildings 20 and 30 years ago before we had improved types and the numerous dwarf broadleaf evergreens we have today. In the past few years, the conifers have been neglected, but the smaller kinds and the slow growing ones like the "dwarf" Hinoki cypress are very handsome in foundation plantings and in gardens as part of the picture with the tree conifers which we have been discussing lately in the column.

The soil where coniferous shrubs are to be planted should be as good as it is for any other kind of shrub or tree. Many conifers have been stuck into fill dirt that was brought in by contractors and dumped around buildings at the last minute before the owners took over. It is amazing that the conifers ever grew at all and a tribute to their hardihood that they even survived.

AVOID SHADE

Remember that conifers do not like shade. Only our native Canada and Carolina hemlock, the English and Irish yews (Taxus) and the plum yews (Cephalo-taxus) will do well in shade. For those areas in full sun, the conifers are all right. Plant them in good soil, and be sure to allow for their growth and development. If you like them fairly close together, be sure to plan for the removal of some of the specimens before they get too big. This will allow your planting to grow on to maturity.

People are afraid to prune conifers. The shaped kinds really need a light going over once or twice a year. Even the irregular kinds like Pfitzer's juniper need to be held back by reaching down into the shrub with pruners and cutting back the longest leaders here and there before they grow too far. We really ought to abandon the old type Pfitzers and plant only the more compact and slightly slower growing "dwarf" Pfitzers. On this type, there is more of the blue - green "youth" foliage we discussed in the column on junipers lately.

The upright Irish, Greek and Swedish junipers can be sheared and shaped a bit annually. Just before the sleet danger starts, large specimens of these column-shaped evergreens can be held together with a soft ring of some kind, and this can be removed when the sleets have gone. Well shaped and pruned conifers of all kinds stand up to snow and sleet better than unpruned ones because of the more numerous and stronger branchlets developed after pruning took place.

Traveler Can Select Meal And Cook It

TRAVEL-LOG
By CLAIRE COX

LODI, Ohio (UPI) — Automation has come to the superhighway.

In less time than it takes to "fill 'er up" at a gas station, a traveler can select a meal, pay for it and watch it cooked before his eyes.

Travelers on the highway linking the New York State Thruway with the Ohio Turnpike still must steer their own cars. Flat tires must be changed manually. A gas station attendant still is required to supervise the roadside pumps.

But when it comes to eating, an experimental new restaurant offers even a greater degree of automation than New York City's famous automats, where nickels and dimes in slots bring forth a wide assortment of food.

The Stouffer Corporation, which operates restaurants in a number of cities, has opened two vending machine - microwave oven restaurants in gasoline stations in Ohio. Both "gas-taurants" are adjacent to superhighways.

PUSH-BUTTON

Called push-button restaurants, they were opened last summer and have been operated so successfully that more are being planned for this and other major arteries.

Here is how they work:

A traveler desiring breakfast, lunch, dinner or a snack, parks his car in the lot adjacent to the restaurant. He enters a tastefully decorated lunch room with no waiters or waitresses, no counters and no cashier.

Tomorrow starts a new year - the beginning of 1962. May I wish you, Mrs. Homemaker, and your family, the best of health and success in the coming year. This is the time of the year that most of us take inventory of our lives - what we accomplished last year, what do we want to do in 1962. I read several months ago ten commandments for happiness which I have changed a bit and hope to make my life better by following them to the best of my ability.

RESOLUTIONS

In other words, these are my New Year resolutions:

1. Keep skids on my tongue - always say less than I think.
2. Make promises sparingly and keep them faithfully no matter what it cost me.
3. Never let an opportunity pass to say a kind and encouraging thing to or about somebody. Praise good work done regardless of who did it.
4. Keep the corners of my mouth up. Try to hide my pains, worries, and disappointments under a pleasant smile.
5. Try to preserve an open mind on all debatable questions.
6. Let my virtues if I have any speak for themselves and refuse to talk of another's vices. Make a rule to say nothing of another unless it is something good.
7. I will try to be careful of other's feelings.
8. Pay no attention to ill natured remarks about me and I'll try to live so nobody will believe them.
9. I'll try not to be too anxious about getting my just dues. I'll try to do my work, be patient, forget self, and I know I'll be respected and rewarded.
10. I'll be interested in others, interested in their welfare, their homes and their families.

HOUSE PLANTS

You can be starving your house plants even though you give them plenty of fertilizer. House plants, like all plants, must have light to manufacture food from fertilizer. Therefore, light is the limiting factor to most plants, not fertilizer. During these winter months plants will actually be light starved. There are some things you can do to help the plant make the best of the light it does get. Be sure to keep the leaves clean, wash with a mild soap and water if necessary. Not only do they look better, but dirt on leaves reduces the amount of light available to the plant. Put the plants in a sunnier window than during spring, summer, and fall. Supplement light with fluorescent light. You will need two 40-watt tubes about 18 inches above the plants. But this may not be practical for the average house grower especially if you do not have but a few plants.

Set up a regular schedule for watering. Yellowing of leaves may be caused by poor drainage, inadequate or spasmodic watering, gas fumes, poor light, lack of plant food or a combination of these.

PLANTING

January is an excellent time to plant or transplant shrubs and transplant shrubs and trees in your landscape. Here are a few suggestions to help you with planting. Dig a hole at least twice the size of the plant ball or the spread of the roots. Use a good soil mixture around the new plant. Set the plants no lower than they were before being dug. Setting one half inch higher than the original depth is best. This will allow for settling. Know the maximum spread of the plant before placing, this eliminates unnecessary pruning which will destroy the form of the plant material.

January is a good time to resolve to give the outdoor areas of your property the consideration you give the indoor spaces. Remember, these areas can make our living more enjoyable.

RELATES U.N. EXPERIENCE

Democracies Are Late, Says Chicago Minister

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article was delivered by Dr. Preston Bradley, pastor of the Peoples Church of Chicago, recently and was sent here by W. B. Jodlaun of Stubbs Avenue. Dr. Bradley had visited here and on one occasion delivered an address here).

Sixteen years ago on this very night I was on a train bound for the Pacific Coast. Accompanying me were some of the members of the United States delegation which had been appointed for the United Nations Charter Convention: Mr. Harold Stassen, who at the time was very much in the public eye; Senator Vandenberg of the State of Michigan; and many other representatives of this nation. It was a special train. The Secretary of State had appointed me an advisor to the State Department for the convention. I shall never forget the experience. I have followed, as closely and as carefully as I could, the sixteen intervening years in the life of the United Nations Organization.

I haven't time this morning to give you all the ramifications or most of the reactions which are in my heart today as I stand on this Sunday morning in our beloved pulpit sixteen years later. Democracies are always late. They always have been late, largely because in making decision on what a democracy must do there are many different people who must be consulted and considered. That is not true with dictatorship. Dictatorship can act quickly and effectively. Democracies must take the slower process of consulting and of considering various points of view and various political loyalties. In a way it is one of the tragedies of democracy, as modern world history easily affirms. I happen to be one of those who believe that Mussolini could have been stopped in Ethiopia without the danger of a world war. If Mussolini had been stopped in Ethiopia the whole history of the world would have been different, but the great democratic nations of the world Britain, France and the United States) felt that it might jeopardize world peace if we stood up at that hour against Mussolini. It should have been done. Democracy was late. I happen to believe that we could have stopped Japan in Manchuria. Japan, without any steel, without any coal, was not prepared to make a military attack. And if the democratic nations of the world had stood up when Japan went into Manchuria the whole of the world's history might have been changed. I happen to believe that democracy should have stood up when Hitler went into the Ruhr Valley (He was parading papiermache tanks in the streets of Berlin trying to convince the people of his invincible power; he was shouting from the housetops telling multitudes of people of his strength; making threats.) But the democratic world was silent when Hitler went into the Ruhr Valley and the rest is history.

I think we are reaching at this moment in the history of our own country and our civilization, the kind of hesitancy which creats a universal fear in the hearts of people that they are to be suddenly wiped out and which is driving people to burrow like rabbits or moles in the earth in something called "shelters for fall-out protection"; where the people are fearful something is going to annihilate them and wipe them out It is creating an American psychology of danger that is doing something to the traditional stability and independent action of the American people.

On this day in which we observe the Sixteenth Anniversary of those nations which I saw sign this charter in the Opera House at San Francisco, we must look again at our problems. I think that the critical moment in which we find ourselves could be successfully met if we stood up again and spoke out without fear or trembling against every ideology that would destroy and multilate the historic power of democracy!

This is the hour for greatness! This is the hour to cleanse our minds of very remnant of thought of total annihilation! This is the hour to do what is always effective when you're dealing with bullies! Khrushchev is the world's number one bully. He talks out of both sides of his mouth: one moment it is a threat of annihilation for the world, and the next moment it is the phrase calling for peace and brotherhood, all of which indicates to every student of the human personality that we are dealing with a psychopath, for in him we find the psychopathic character and the qualities of one who is pure bully and pure braggadicio! You never met a bully in your life who wasn't a coward! He talks loud and screams and shouts and when you call his bluff he seeks refuge and disappears!

I think the time has arrived when we should call Khrushchev's bluff! What has the democratic world to apologize for? What have we to be hesitant about? Why is America trembling and fearful? Why has this man created such a psychological atmosphere as has settled down upon all the world? Let him continue and sooner or later (and I think it will be sooner) he will make the fatal blunder! He has indicated the qualify of fatality in his last threat to explode a 50-megaton bomb. I do not think a 50-megaton bomb ever will be exploded, although he may do some unprecedented exploding! This belief of mine is determined by the fact that the neutral and non-committed nations of the world have spoken out and already in the last twenty-four hours there are reverberations from a large percentage of those whom Mr. Khrushchev feels are friendly to him. A freindship inspired by fear! And any friendship inspired by fear is a friendship that cannot endure! Friendships are not made through fear and do you think that his so-called allies and friends are going to stick by him should he cover them with devastating fall-out? Their admiration would turn to contempt! Protests are now being formulated (and they will be increasingly formulated) on the part of the very people and the very nations and the very groups that Mr. Khrushchev is depending on in this hour, and Mr. Khrushchev and the Kremlin (the 12 men who control the policies of the Soviet people) will awaken some morning to the realization that will be the beginning of the end for the tyranny of the Soviet Union, and this will happen without war! I say this quite dogmatically.

You will remember these words in five or ten years, long after the voice which speaks them is silenced, but you will remember these words: there will never be another world war! There will be a series of localized conflicts and irritations. The young man of twenty in this congregation this morning will never, never know a world free from conflict and consternation! That world is here! The world that I knew in my youth has completely disappeared. I shall never know that kind of a world again! But in the presence of all this I have no hesitancy in saying to you (and I realize full well the responsibility of saying it) I am not afraid. Mr. Khrushchev does not have me buffaloed nor in a corner.

I believe the time has arrived for a restoration and a renaissance of something of that spirit that wrote the Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of our Independence! I wish we had men in the United States Senate and in the Congress who would say now: "Give me liberty or give me death," when people are obsessed with a slogan "Red or Dead". I tell you I shall never be Red, but I shall never be dead destroyed by the militarism of a mad man and a psychopath! The American people have been inspired by press and radio and by commentators to think they should burrow into the earth and build fall-out shelters, until people are worried and frightened. That, to me, has in the background more than a suspicion of profit and dollars! I read an ad just the other day which said, "We will build you a fall-out shelter, and finance you over a five-year period!" Is there anything more incongrous, more ridiculous than that? I'm not going to build a fall-out shelter!

I'm never going to enter a fall-out shelter! I'm not going to be swayed by the emotionalism of people who have selfish interests involved! I am not concerned, not at all! And furthermore, may I say I wouldn't want to live in this blessed country of mine should this tragedy happen to my own life or the life of my family. I wouldn't want to come out of a hole in the earth to a scorched nation, to a land that will not grow any grain or fruit for a hundred hears from the impregnation of poison. I don't want to live and have any other American die! I want to live with you, all of you! I don't want even the animals to suffer this tragedy! I don't want my country to get to the low ebb of moral sensitivity whereby selfish survival becomes more important than community survival! If I was the only person to come out of a fall-out shelter in the City of Chicago if this disaster happened, I wouldn't want to live one hour!

My friends, let's get our values straight. Let's have a renaissance of something that's rapidly disappearing: old-fashioned courage! Let's not live in a world where we think evil is stronger than good and evil men are stronger than good men! I see no evidence that God has retired; I see no evidence that God has resigned—not one single bit of evidence! I see God weeping and pleading for a great renaissance of the same kind of courage that we heard in the lesson this morning. This is the psychology that ought to settle down upon the American people: every dictator finally meets his Waterloo! Call the roll of history: Genghis Khan, who held all of China, all of Asia in his hands! What happened to him? Call the roll of Napoleon. I stood at his tomb the other day in the City of Paris and looked down upon that tomb! Call the roll of Napoleon and see him standing a prisoner on a British frigate and watching the shores of his beloved France fade away into the fog of an unrealized ambition! Come with me to that little city in Italy where I stood on the very spot where Mussolini died, hanging by his heels with filth and water running out of his nostrils, while the people kicked at him and spit at him, the same pople who, a few weeks ago, shouted "Viva Mussolini!" See him die, and then hear him as I heard him once in the Piazza in the City of Rome stand and shout to the world: "We will crush every sniveling democracy on earth!", and a world shivered! I didn't! Come to the Wilhelmstrasse in the City of Berlin and down among the twisted steel and mortar see, crawling upon his belly like the viper he was, his nostrils filled with the stench of his own frying flesh, see Hitler die! And then hear him as I heard him once in the same Wilhelmstrasse say to the world: "The next thousand years belong to Nazism!" Khrushchev, beware! All of history is against you! Americans, be of good courage!

PAKISTAN LIFE CHANGES

Camel Driver Now Head Of His Clan

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Bashir Ahmad is no longer Bashir the camel driver. He is Bashir, head of his clan, a man of substance among his people.

And as soon as a new pickup truck Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson gave him arrives from the United States in mid-January, he will be Bashir the truck driver. His earnings will jump from about $2 to $8 a day.

In the two months since he returned from his heady visit to the United States as Johnson's guest, Bashir has mastered the art and mystery of driving a truck.

No more does Bashir wear a torn shirt and soiled loin cloth. He walks the streets of Karachi in long coat, a jinnah cap of brown fur, white cotton trousers —and Western, Texas style boots.

He is now addressed by everyone, high and low, as "Bashir Sahib," a gentleman, if you please.

He has hired a Pakistani for a dollar a day to drive his camel for him while he plans for the future of his family and settles disputes of his clan as an elder, the position to which the clan elevated him on his return from the United States.

"I love my people and they love me," he said. "I want to live with my people and die with them. I cannot leave them."

This why Bashir still lives in his mud hut, turning down a government offer of a three-room house in a middle class district.

Last week he called on the Karachi housing authority and proposed a one-room tenement for each of the 800 families of his clan.

Bashir said he wanted his people to give up life at a subhuman level. The housing authority promised the government will move all the hut dwellers to a better place in the suburbs.

Bashir says he still loves driving a camel cart, but Allah gives everyone only one chance in life.

"Here is a chance for me to do something for my children, feed them, clothe them, educate them and place them in a better position in society," he said.

"I am taking up truck driving firstly to use the chance given by Allah and secondly, to raise the standard of living of my family."

The first thing he did on his return from te United States was put his 8-year-old daughter in a primary school. Two younger sons will go to school when they come of age. His illiterate, 19-year-old son will go to an adult education center. This son also probably will inherit the camel when the truck arrives.

"After I am settled mentally I myself will go to an adult education center to learn more than signing my name," he said.

Fame has cost Bashir. There is his rise in living standards to maintain. There is that dollar a day he pays out to his substitute camel driver. And there is postage.

Bashir gets from 20 to 30 letters a month from people in the United States. He can't afford to answer them. One stamp to mail a letter abroad would take about one-tenth of his net daily earnings. But he has some one write his lettters to Johnson regularly.

So with the cost of fame rising, that $6 or so extra a day he will earn driving Lyndon B. Johnson's truck will come in mighty handy.

Mississippi Session May Be Stormy

By BEN MCCARTY

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Mississippi lawmakers face perhaps their most controversial session in recent history when they convene Tuesday.

Gov. Ross Barnett, who has predicted a harmonious session, will outline his program to a joint session of the legislature at 2 p.m. Wednesday.

The biggest thorn in the governor's program will be trying to balance the budget.

Other major issues facing the lawmakers include reapportionment, congressional redistricting, liquor, educational changes, teacher pay and alleged kickbacks to county officials.

Rep. Billy Shelton of Lee County said he fears Barnett was too optimistic when he predicted a harmonious session because "too many important decisions must be made on which many will not agree."

Barnett earlier advised legislators he would seek a $282.8 million budget for the next biennium. He said it would be balanced by tax revenues and a $3.38 million cut in school funds.

The cut from school money represents the yearly salary of about 1,500 school teachers.

The governor's recommended balanced budget came by trimming school expenditures, adding $11 million to estimated tax revenues, getting $9 million more from the veterans farm and home board, getting $7 million by applying the sales tax at the wholesale rather than retail level, estimating the surplus at $5 million more.

The budget for the present biennium was set at $373 million, which included a $34 million surplus left by the previous administration.

The budget commission has collected $244 million for this biennium and expects to collect $349.5 million the next biennium.

Barnett has predicted the rise in the state's economy, pushed by induustrial expansion, will provide enough money to prevent tax increases.

Talk among capitol sources indicated that if Barnett runs into trouble in attempting to balance the budget, he will not ask the legislature to float a bond issue or to pass other deficit financing measures.

Instead, the sources said, he will call a special session and ask for across-the-board tax raises to cover the deficit.

Fire Damage Is Extensive

Monroe firemen said the fire was reported to them at 11:20 p.m., and they fought the blaze for several hours before extinguishing it. The house, which belonged to Mrs. O. M. Arnette, was extensively damaged when the blaze climbed the walls around the floor furnace and razed the attic.

Mrs. Arnette was home alone when it started, and the report was turned in by a next door neighbor, Mrs. Hobb, who noticed the flames.

Fire units three and six and ladder two responded to the call. Mrs. Arnette carried approximately $5,000 insurance on the house.

2 Men Booked Late Saturday By City Police

Two men were booked for driving while under the influence of intoxicating beverages by Twin City police late Saturday.

Monroe police booked 77-year-old Matthew Ball, Negro, of F-40-A Foster Homes, for DWI, reckless driving, hit and run driving and disturbing the peace by public drunkenness.

He was taken into custody at F-40-A Foster Homes at 5:10 p.m. after police received a complaint from Negro Willie O'Quinn, 3214 Renwick St., that Ball had hit his truck while it was parked on DeSiard Street.

Bond for Ball was set at $600 and he will be tried in Monroe city court.

In West Monroe, James C. Deal, 33, of 2900 Fort Miro St., Monroe, was booked on three counts after hitting a telephone pole.

West Monroe police booked him for DWI, reckless driving and operating a motor vehicle without a valid state driver's license in his possession.

New President Takes Office In Philippines

MANILA (AP) — Diosdado Macapagal, the poor boy who fought his way to the top in Philippine politics, was inaugurated Saturday and it was strictly the people's show.

The fifth president of the Philippines took the oath of office in a traditional Filipino shirt rather than Western formal dress.

The former vice president inserted some remarks in the national language in to his speech in English for the sake of the uneducated.

He motioned the guards to let the people come forward past the restraining barriers to be closer to him.

He told them he will be president "not only of the rich but more so of the poor."

141 Persons Die As Epidemic Smallpox Hits

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — A smallpox epidemic, which has stirred international alarm because an airline passenger from Pakistan reported ill in London, raged in Karachi Saturday. In the past week 141 persons have died, 11 of them Friday night, by official count.

Smallpox patients in various hospitals in the city rose to 210.

Medical authorities started a mass inoculation program in schools and colleges and 20,000 persons were inoculated throughout the city.

Ismet Khan, 24, a Pakistani who flew to London on Christmas Day, was taken to a hospital there last Thursday where his illness was diagnosed as smallpox. He had used two planes, an Air France plane to Paris and a Greek airline plane to London and had made stops in Tehran and Rome as well as Paris. Scores of hostesses, customs men, and other airport personnel were inoculated in Rome, Paris and London.

Efforts also were made to warn passengers on the two planes, though most were believed to have carried international vaccination certificates.

DRYER FIRE

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Suburban Grandview firemen were called out when a hair dryer ignited a bed.

Man Recovering From Accidental Gunshot Wound

James Griggs of Calhoun was reported doing fine last night in the hospital after accidentally shooting himself in the right leg and foot Saturday morning.

Griggs reportedly was climbing through a fence when his .12-gauge shotgun discharged, striking him in the right leg and foot.

He was taken to St. Francis hospital for emergency treatment shortly after 10 a.m., when the accident occurred and was reported doing well last night.

West Monroe Man Booked

Maxine Landers, of Bernice, obtained a warrant for him charging Harris with the theft. He was held under a $500 bond and will be tried later.

Fire Destroys Kansas Church Built In 1880's

LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP)— A fire Saturday destroyed the Church of the Immaculate Conception, a landmark in the north section of the city.

The blaze was discovered shortly after midnight. All available fire equipment and personnel in Leavenworth and Ft. Leavenworth fought the fire throughout the night as temperatures dipped to near zero.

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Alexander Harvey, pastor of the church, said he was unable to get into the building to save "the Blessed Sacrament."

Firemen said the blaze appeared to have started near the back of the brick structure under the main altar. Only the shell of the building remained.

Work on the church was first begun in 1866. It was completed in 1868. There was no estimate on the loss.

The 16 bells in the north tower of the church were saved.

HE'S COMING IN THE DOOR NOW-- DON'T WORRY, DAGWOOD--I'LL TAKE CARE OF THE INGRATE
JULIUS, YOU'RE A BRUTE -- HAVE YOU NO HEART?
THANKS, MRS. DITHERS
WAIT, DAGWOOD--I'M GOING HOME WITH YOU--I WON'T STAY IN THE SAME HOUSE WITH THAT WRETCH
HE'S NOT FIRING YOU, DAGWOOD-- HE STOPPED BY TO SAY HE WAS GOING TO GIVE YOU A RAISE A RAISE ?

HOW COME YOU HAVE MONEY ENOUGH TO GIVE DAGWOOD A RAISE, AFTER TELLING ME YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO BUY ME A MINK COAT?
I'M GOING BACK TO OUR HOUSE, BUT DON'T YOU DARE FOLLOW ME--YOU'RE NOT WELCOME, JULIUS DITHERS
CHIC YOUNG
WILL SOMEBODY TELL ME WHAT I'M DOING WRONG, SO I CAN STOP IT?

CRIMESTOPPERS TEXTBOOK
DO NOT PERMIT CHILDREN TO PUNCTURE OR BURN THEM.
KEEP IN SEPARATE BAG UNTIL SAFELY DISPOSED OF BY GARBAGE MAN.
Dick Turner

THEY FOUND THAT THE ONLY GOLFER THAT DAY WAS A MAN NAMED GEO. PARDY.
WHY, GEO. PARDY WAS HEAD OF NEIGHBORHOOD IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION LAST YEAR.
HE DONATED MONEY TO BUILD THAT BAND SHELL IN THE PARK. HE GAVE—NEVERTHELESS, TRACY AND SAM HAVE GONE THERE TO PICK HIM UP.
AND WE HAVE TO GO NOW, TOO, CHIEF. BYE-BYE.
PARDY ALWAYS GAVE CHRISTMAS PARTIES FOR THE KIDS—AND AT THE PARDY HOME—
YES, I DID PLAY GOLF THAT DAY, AND I'M FAMILIAR WITH THE NEWS STORIES OF THE DEAD WOMAN HAVING BEEN FOUND IN THE OLD ESTATE.
BUT I SAW NO CONNECTION. AFTER ALL—AS FAR AS MY GOLF IS CONCERNED, I COULDN'T KILL A RABBIT AT FIFTY YARDS.
—IN FACT, I DON'T BELIEVE THE POLICE HAVE EVEN PROVED THAT A GOLF BALL KILLED THE OLD LADY.
RIGHT. IN FACT, MR. PARDY, THE GOLF BALL THEORY HAS BEEN KEPT SECRET AND NOT DISCUSSED PUBLICLY NOR EVEN SUGGESTED IN THE NEWS STORIES—TILL NOW.
AT THIS MOMENT LIZZ STEPS INTO THE ROOM WITH THE TWO CHILDREN.
THAT'S THE NICE MAN THAT TOOK US AWAY THE DAY GRANNY WAS HURT.
THOSE CHILDREN?? I NEVER SAW THEM BEFORE IN MY LIFE—THEY'RE MISTAKEN!
Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.
Dist. by The Chicago Tribune.
HOLD IT, PARDY.
CHESTER GOULD
DO YOU SEE WHAT I SEE, SAM?
HUH?? OBLITERATED FINGERPRINTS?
JUST WHO IS THIS MAN PARDY?

WHAT'S THE MATTER, LOIS?
IT'S THE CHILDREN! I'VE DONE NOTHING BUT YELL AND SCREAM AT THEM ALL DAY!
I DO LOVE THEM, BUT ALL I EVER SEEM TO BE SAYING IS "WHO SPILLED THIS?" AND "YOU STOP THAT HITTING!"
I NEVER GET TO TALK TO AN ADULT! BY THE TIME YOU GET HOME I'M AS JITTERY AS A CAT!
WELL, THEY'RE ALL IN BED NOW, AND WE CAN HAVE SOME NICE, QUIET, RELAXING CONVERSATION.
THANK GOODNESS.
ER...

LET'S SEE, SIXTY-TWO THOUSAND, TWO HUNDRED SIXTY-TWO AND THREE-TENTHS...

OKAY, THERE'S THE ANSWER!
THERE, WE PUT BACK IN EXACTLY ONE QUART, SIX AND FIVE-SIXTHS FLUID OUNCES!

ONLY A NIGHT FROM OLD TO NEW,
ONLY A SLEEP FROM NIGHT TO MORN.
THE NEW IS BUT THE OLD COME TRUE.
EACH SUNRISE SEES A NEW YEAR BORN.

NEW YEAR'S EVE! ANOTHER YEAR WASHED UP! POOR ISSI! KNOW HOW TH' OLD GUY MUST FEEL! YOU AN' I, SANDY! FEW WEEKS BACK, IN THAT STINKIN' PRISON, WE CAME AWFUL CLOSE TO NOT EVEN LASTIN' AS LONG AS OLD SIXTY-ONE!

BY NOW YOU AN' I COULD BE OUT ON TH' DUMP WITH A LITTLE DIRT OVER US, IN A CRAZY PLACE CALLED "TRIBUTO" THAT MOST FOLKS NEVER HEARD OF!

'CEPT FOR A FIGHTIN' MAN, AN AMERICAN WITH MORE INSIDES THAN "SPEECHES"! JOHNNY QUICK! WOW! WAS IT GOOD T'SEE HIM SHOW UP!

COME T'THINK OF IT, IT'S BEEN QUITE A YEAR! JOHNNY WAS JUST GETTIN' STARTED, AND HOW! HA! WHEN THOSE SLICK FOREIGN THUGS TRIED TO "NEUTRALIZE" HIM...

WHO PROTECTED JOHNNY? JOHNNY DID, PERSONALLY! HE SURE HAD A LOT O' WHAT "DADDY" WARBUCKS HAS! DRIVE! AND HE'S SEVEN-STAR 'MERICAN!

WELL, SIR, SANDY, WE'D HAVE BEEN SITTIN' PRETTY YET, WITH JOHNNY AN' MARLENE, 'CEPT SHE WAS BLIND AN' WE FIGGERED WE KNEW TH' ONE DOC COULD CURE HER! TURNED OUT WE WERE RIGHT!

BUT THAT MEANT GIVIN' AWAY WHERE WE WERE! AND, WITH TH' RUMOR THAT "DADDY" WAS STILL ALIVE, THAT MEANT WE'D BE HOT AS A TWO-DOLLAR PISTOL AGAIN, FOR "DADDY'S" ENEMIES!

SO WE BLEW! THEN WE MET DANDY DOOLEY AND TEE, AND BIG AUGUST AND ALL THAT CROWD! GEE! WHAT REAL, GRAND FOLKS! THEN THAT HIJACKED PLANE! BUT THEN ... THEN "DADDY"!

Y'KNOW, SANDY, IT'S BEEN A REAL GOOD YEAR FOR US! AT LEAST, HERE WE ARE, STILL ALIVE AN' HEALTHY!

ARF!

YES! HERE WE ARE, BUT JUST WHERE I COULDN'T TELL YUH! BUT SO LONG AS WE'RE WITH "DADDY," WHO CARES?

HAPPY NEW YEAR, ANNIE! WHAT ARE YOU DOING IN HERE SO QUIET?

OH, JUST SORT O' ADDIN' UP TH' SCORE! IT COMES TO A REAL HAPPY NEW YEAR!
